Beef and soybean prices drop

By DIETER KRIEG
LANCASTER — Agricultural markets continue to puzzle economists and farmers. This week, for example, the local price for soybeans dropped to below $6 per bushel, after having been above $7 per bushel just a month ago. And beef prices, for months already an agonizing situation, continue to slump after hitting new lows for 1976 within the past 10 days. Things have picked up just a bit, but cattlemen still don't have much to smile about.

Al Landis, Pennfield Corporation, told Lancaster Farming on Friday that he believed the price of soybeans went up too high a few weeks ago, and the various economic pressures are now coming into effect to bring about more realistic relationships between the price of feed and finished beef and dairy products, etc. Prices rose dramatically several weeks ago when the Soviets announced their grain purchases and U.S. stocks are low anyway.

Acreage of soybeans are low too.

The price of beans on the Chicago market was $5.85 on Monday (a low) and bounced back up to $6.20 by Thursday. According to Landis, not even officials at Central Soya, a major soybean concern, know exactly

Tobacco crop varies in county

By JOANNE SPAHR
LANCASTER — Various and sundry weather conditions around the county have given rise to an assortment of tobacco reports. In the Millersville-Manor area, cutting has been going on as long as a week and a half now, while in the northwestern portion of the county around Mt. Joy, tobacco farmers still have topping to do because of having to replant hail-damaged crops during the second and third weeks of June. The largest percentage of growers, however, are in the midst of topping and spraying for suckers, awaiting their first cutting.

Wilmer Rohrer, Lancaster R2, is one grower who has had excellent conditions and is running ahead of schedule. He began cutting on July 28, and in a week's time had harvested five out of his 22 acres.

This first cutting, he said, was about the same as last year's in some cases and "above average" in others.

When Rohrer says "as good as last year's," it must be noted that his crop was of good weight then, also, whereas some farmers in the county did not have a big crop because of too many extremes in weather conditions.

"Once and a while, you run into some spots that aren't as big as others," he said. However, he went on to acknowledge that this is a normal occurrence for any crop.

Farmers advised to be informed

MECHANICS GROVE — It isn't at every dairy cattle judging contest that someone registers a perfect score, but it happened Thursday at the Maurice Welk farm, near here, where Lancaster County Holstein breeders were gathered to hold their annual field day. Ken Groff, Leola, did the deed, amassing a total of 300 points. He thereby bested runner-up Bob Kauffman of Elizabethtown, and winners in both youth and ladies divisions and received an appropriate trophy for the accomplishment. Placing third in the men's division of the contest was Richard Hess, followed by Gerald Kreider and Ellis Denlinger. All received prizes donated by John Kreider, Holstein breeder and equipment manufacturer.

Mrs. Richard Hess of Strasburg scooped up the ladies' first place for at least the second time, but she's reluctant to attach any significance to it. "It's just luck," she commented matter-of-factly. Ruth Clark, Mim Kauffman, Averill Royer, and Cindy Bollinger followed in that order to complete the "top five" in ladies' judging. Prizes were given by Penn-Jersey Harvestore.

In the youth division, it was Leonard Stoltzfus capturing first place, followed by Mervin Minnich, Cheryl Bollinger, Bruce Kreider, and Phil Crouse. Leonard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Stoltzfus, Gap R2, who just a week earlier captured the premiere

200 attend Holstein field day

By JOANNE SPAHR
ELVERSON — A balmy, breezy day settled on Chester County last Tuesday and made a perfect setting for the Chester County Holstein Field Day held on Rocky Side Holsteins farm owned and operated by Jefferson Yoder, here.

The morning's activities included judging two classes of Holsteins, 3-year-olds and aged cows, and "nosing around" the dairy operation which consists of a 55 cow milking barn and 60 heifers. All told, Yoder farms approximately 1200 acres with 85 on the home farm, and has about 800 of the acres in corn. He also grows wheat and hay.

While dairy judging was the main event of the day, socializing was just as important, as friends, neighbors, and interested Holstein breeders got together to have a good time. Approximately 200 people showed up to share in the fun.

After a noontime lunch of chicken barbeque, four speakers took the podium to individually enlighten the contented, relaxed crowd on key aspects of dairying.

Carol Yeager, Chester County dairy princess, was the first to lead off with a very brief speech on promoting milk.

"I've noticed when I go places, that some farmers don't even drink milk," said the blonde-haired princess.

She went on to say that farmers have the responsibility of pulling together and setting an example to promote their product.

Next, Peter Blodgett, who was also the official for the day, spoke on bull proving, saying that Holstein breeders constantly need to

Science seeks superior species

By DIETER KRIEG
LANDISVILLE — It takes 10 to 12 years to come up with a new plant variety — one which might be resistant to anthracnose, corn blight, potato leaf hopper, or black shank disease. In fact, it may take longer than that. This is what visitors to Penn State's research farm, near here, were told on Wednesday as they carefully inspected the University's experimental plots and asked a variety of questions.

The occasion was the annual field day, when the facilities are formally opened up to interested farmers, extension agents, and agribusiness people. Unlike in previous years, this year's tours were conducted in a way which allowed visitors to spend as much time as they wished at any one stop. A tractor and wagon made the rounds; visitors hopped aboard and jumped off at any point they wished. There were no 10-minute speeches, just a lot of answers to questions.

As every year, researchers from the University experiment here and at 13 other locations across the state. The crops featured at Landisville include tobacco, flowers, forage crops, corn, potatoes, grapes, and soybeans. Trials take seed, fertilizer, insecticides and herbicides into consideration, with the ultimate goal being better plants for the farmer.

John Yocum, superintendent of the Landisville facility, led visitors through the tobacco research plots, where primary efforts are being concentrated on finding plant varieties which are less susceptible to the etch virus and black shank

PUT WATER WHERE IT'S NEEDED WATERMASTER 3

Moulded from polyethylene for ease of cleaning and maximum life. The Watermaster 3 has been designed for use by broilers, pullets, layers and turkeys from day-old onwards.

The special anti-perch shape prevents birds from fouling the drinker and in this, the big brother of the world renowned Watermaster 2, the 15 in diameter offers greater drinking space. The valve system is extremely simple to ensure continuous water supply. The large flat filter is easily removed for cleaning and all fittings are self-sealing with no 'O' rings or washers needed. Watermasters are supplied complete with the BEC saddle connector, 10ft. of tubing and suspension. The recommended stocking rate is 10 to 14 waterers per 1000 birds.

The specially designed protective ring for day-old birds is ideal for turkeys, breeding stock and rearing pullets. The water ballast gives excellent stability without making waterers too heavy to handle.

The Bec 75 Waterer:

- 1 Takes up less room in the house—more room for the birds
- 2 It is distribution that counts - more drinking points, for the same money, means that the birds have less distance to walk to water
- 3 Lighter and more convenient to handle and clean
- 4 At the end of the crop, easy to empty house - one person can carry 50 to 100 waterers
- 5 Easy Connections a) Saddle connector (see inset) b) Tube fittings (see inset) c) new easy method of raising and lowering the waterer with hanger box

Livestock market and auction news

They call them the "new exotics" ... calves from first-calf heifers of the popular beef breeds, sired by young JERSEY bulls.

The advantage? Higher conception rates and easier calving for the original heifers; superior mothering ability and rapid gains through increased milk production for subsequent generations.

Commercial herds of the larger dairy breeds have also discovered the advantage of using JERSEY bulls to breed their first-calf heifers to decrease calving difficulty.

If you are looking for a young bull — an efficient dairy animal — a future show prospect — or a superior family cow — write for the new Pennsylvania Jersey Breeders Directory to locate JERSEY breeders in your area.

Plan to attend the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Sale on September 11 at the Guernsey Pavilion east of Lancaster, Pa. Watch for our September 4 ad.

LIFE on the farm

By Dieter Krieg, Editor

I had taken a day off, but I don't remember when it was or how my wife and I spent the time. I do remember that I walked out the door the following morning with my camera in hand. For quite a while I had wanted to take a picture of one of the finest 2-year old heifers I had ever worked with. Today was finally going to be the day, I thought happily, as I drove to work.

Affectionately called "Little Buddy" because of her comparatively small size and gentle personality, the young cow was a model for both pleasant appearance and profitable production. Her features were fine and exceptionally well proportioned. She carried herself in a regal manner, and her head was that of a bovine princess. Her udder and teat placement were perfect.

On top of that, this dark and shiny heifer had been producing milk so consistently that I had predicted her to break the 17,000 pounds mark in her first lactation. That figure might not mean much to urban readers of this column, so I'll phrase it in another way: That amount of milk was nearly 17 times her bodyweight and it was roughly 2000 gallons, which would supply two families with a gallon of milk per day for just about three years.

THANK YOU

It was a year ago last month that I became editor of this newspaper, and it's about time that I acknowledge appreciation for the scores of nice remarks I've received from readers. At the same time I also want to apologize for not having taken the time to reply to a good many letters in person. (Instead I play around with pencil and paper trying to figure out unique layout or clever cartoon). Last week's editorial drawing brought on a number of enthusiastic responses from readers, which is what is now prompting me to finally say "thank you." It's always good to know that work is appreciated.

My "Life on the farm" columns and editorials have consistently received the bulk of compliments coming my way, which is especially satisfying to me since those articles reflect my experiences and thinking. And readers have acknowledged they appreciate the fact my background is in farming. It was on that basis, in fact, that I was first hired to become farm editor of a central Pennsylvania newspaper 28 months ago, a position which I held until joining Lancaster Farming in July of 1975.

I remember sitting in J.E. Holtzinger's impressive office; (he's president of the Mirror Publishing Co., Altoona-State College) Coming straight off the farm without a single "Little Buddy" was a perfect individual, as far as I was concerned. She ranked very high in her production, appearance and disposition. Her only problem was that we were having some difficulties in getting her back in calf. In fact, I had suspected her of coming into heat the evening before I took my day off.

My employer greeted me with a grim face and shocking words when I returned to work that morning.

"Little Buddy is dead," he announced in a manner that strained his emotions. Before I could even ask "how," I felt as though a powerful vacuum was working on my insides. "She was in heat yesterday," my friend began to explain, "and she killed herself while tied in the free-stall barn."

We both walked out to the horrible scene and remained speechless for a moment. Then we talked briefly about how great a heifer she was. My camera—still in the car—was just a silent witness to our words and useless for the picture I had wanted.

Although her "portrait" was never taken, memories of "Little Buddy" are not lost—as they never are when great cows are involved in Life on the farm.

credit in journalism, I didn't expect to be hired. I even felt out of place in front of his huge desk, and was somewhat awed about the thought of even being there.

After a lengthy talk which centered 99 per cent on farming and one per cent on jokes, Mr. Holtzinger announced "The job is yours if you want it."

I just about fell off my chair since I had thought a college degree in journalism would have been a major requirement to qualify. (I do hold a B.S. degree in dairy science, however). "You qualify," he reassured me, "you can write and you have a strong background in farming." I was happy but also a little uneasy about becoming a farm editor so "instantly."

As I look back now, and drawing my conclusions from personal achievements I've found in this kind of work, as well as the kind responses which readers have consistently given me for more than two years, I am grateful and happy for the way this career has been working out. I thank all those who made it possible, both here at Lancaster Farming and at my previous position, and all the many readers who have taken a bit of their time to send a compliment my way. Thank you very much!

THE PIETIST

Lesson for August 8, 1976

Background Scripture: Acts 8:4-19; 10:1-48; 19:8-20; Romans 8:1-9a; 1 John 3:1-3. Devotional Reading: 1 John 1

The terms "piety" and "pietist" are often terms of derision among many people today, church and non-church people alike. For many people, the term "piety" conjures up an image of "holier-than-thou" airs by people who are likely to be somewhat fanatical in their religious expressions. Often there is a suggestion that piety is likely to be a pretense or "show," yet, even when it is obviously sincere, people are uncomfortable with it.

Keeping the hour of prayer

Some time ago I was at a denominational meeting in which the word "piety" was mentioned, eliciting from some there sneers of contempt. A few of us protested that piety was essentially a good term and, properly understood, a vital element in the life of faith.

Essentially, the pietist is a person who is most sincere in his search for the experience of God in his life. He does not leave his divine encounter to chance, but develops his receptivity through prayer, study, and life-sharing.

Perhaps the key to the pietist's religion is receptivity. He is receptive to experiencing the Lord in whatever ways and means he can, wherever he can, and through whomever he can.

Such a man was Cornelius in Acts 10. Cornelius was known as a "God-fearer," a gentile who followed many of the beliefs and practices of the Jewish religion without, however, becoming Jews through circumcision. "God-fearers" were more interested in the monotheism and ethics of Judaism than in the rituals.

No divine partiality

Cornelius's piety is evident. First, he tells Peter, "I was keeping the ninth hour of prayer in my house." The pietist is a person who submits his life to daily discipline so that prayer is a daily encounter rather than an occasional experience. He finds God in his daily life because he looks for him expectantly each day.

Secondly, Cornelius reacts to the vision he sees with openness and receptivity. He does precisely what the vision tells him to do. He did not stop to first determine whether this experience fit in with his doctrines. Although Simon Peter is a Jew (and an outcast Jew, at that), Cornelius did not let that constitute a barrier. When Peter arrives (also under the direction of a vision), Cornelius says: "Now therefore we are all here present in the sight of God, to hear all that you have been commanded by the Lord" (10:33).

Peter recognized what every pietist discovers: "Truly I perceive that God shows no partiality, but in every nation anyone who fears him and does what is right is acceptable to him"

TO PREPARE SILOS

The corn crop is developing rapidly and with a few more weeks of good growing and drying weather some producers will be making corn silage. This is the best harvesting method to preserve the maximum feed nutrients in an acre of corn. In preparing for this silage crop no doubt some silos will need some prior attention. Concrete silos often become pitted and rough after years of use and need to be re-surfaced; this can be done as the silo is being emptied, which requires frequent attention, or done at one time before the silo is filled in the late summer or fall. The important thing is to have a smooth, air-tight surface to the inside of the silo. Silo manufacturers and dealers can assist in providing the materials to do this work. Good corn silage is one of the most economical feeds for both dairy and beef cattle; air-tight storage facilities are needed for quality silage.

TO RECOGNIZE CORN

FIELD HAZARD

It has been called to my attention that tall corn fields near rural road intersections present a traffic hazard to drivers. We are aware that the view at many stop signs in the farm sections of the county is restricted because of the tall corn growing very close to the intersection. It will be of help to drivers if the top part of the stalk is cut off after the ear of corn has reached the dent stage of maturity; this stalk above the ear can be fed to livestock as it is removed from the field. In many above the ear can be fed to livestock as it is removed (10:34). Peter realizes that God is not concerned with man-made religious labels. And to seal the experience, we are told: "While Peter was still saying this, the Holy Spirit fell on all who heard the word" (10:44). Piety anyone?

from the field. In many cases only the corners of the field need to be topped to give a better view of on-coming traffic. Corn growers with fields in these locations are urged to consider this practice in order to prevent accidents.

NEW Ensil-ate™

The Silage Preservative With A Real Difference

WHAT IS IT?

ENSIL—ATE is a silage additive designed to

- Reduce Rancidity
- Prevent Oxidation and Over-Heating
- Inhibit Mold Growth
- Increase Palatability of any Ensilage

ENSIL—ATE has its own feed value!

Protein 11 percent - Fat 2 percent - Fiber 35 percent

ENSIL — ATE Adds Highly Digestible Protein and Fiber in the form of ground soybran flakes

ENSIL—ATE is perfectly safe to use and contains only all-natural proteins

ENSIL—ATE is backed by leading experimental stations as well as Master Mix Research

HOW IS IT USED?

ENSIL—ATE requires no additional equipment

It should be added to your silage at the rate of 10 lbs. per ton. Packaged in 50 lb. paper sacks, each bag will effectively treat 5 tons of silage. Simply spread the bag on the silage wagon before or during filling.

REMEMBER — You can mix 10 lbs./ton easier and more thoroughly than 1 lb./ton of silage that most additives require. ENSIL—ATE can also be added as the silo is being filled.

All air-cooled engines are NOT created equal

It's easier to call an engine "heavy duty" than it is to build it that way. Many carburated "heavy duty" industrial engines simply don't deserve the title. They consume expensive fuel at an alarming rate, they are prone to break down or overheat and their life expectancy is measured in hundreds of hours. If any engine in the world qualifies as heavy duty, it's Deutz. Deutz engines are often chosen to power equipment with unit price tags over half a million dollars—that's heavy duty.

When it comes to cooling efficiency, the Deutz precision-engineered axial-flow cooling air blowers have no equal. This direct approach to cooling (without coolants, additives, cavitation) means our engines need only about 60% of the air volume liquid-cooled engines require. Combustion efficiency is greatly improved by higher head temperatures and engine life is extended by cooler oil temperatures.

If you think air-cooled engines are prone to overheat, talk to Deutz users in the scorching heat of the Imperial or San Joaquin valleys. There, Deutz engines deliver more than 20,000 hours of trouble-free service before a major overhaul.

There are lots of things that separate Deutz engines from water-cooled and other air-cooled engines. Things like blower design, big lube oil coolers, oil-cooled pistons, special alloy cylinder heads, a research and development team of more than 1,000 engineers. These are all important advantages. Still we say: If you can find an engine that uses less fuel than a Deutz—buy it.

Use all the corn silage you cut — and make more money with Beacon Silage Pre-Serv

Nearly 2,000 farmers in the Northeast have treated more than 300,000 tons of hay this year, and they used only 2 pounds of Pre-Serv per ton to get better hay. Most of them will use Beacon Silage Pre-Serv on corn silage too, for these reasons:

It's Profitable

Pre-Serv prevents heat build-up, controls oxidation, and greatly reduces spoilage and shrinkage. So don't waste money by throwing away spoiled silage. You'll get up to 30% more feeding value — essential protein, carbohydrates and vitamins per ton when you use Beacon Silage Pre-Serv.

It's Convenient

You can harvest and treat corn silage at 60-65% moisture. Apply it wet with an applicator, or sprinkled dry over each load. You save labor because there's less lumping and bridging in the silo.

It's Economical

A ton of silage requires only ½ pound of dry Pre-Serv, or 1 pound of liquid Pre-Serv. Getting the most feed value out of your silage with Beacon Pre-Serv is part of what we call be searching good cow families for bulls, so that the base isn't narrowed. He also urged that cows be identified by sire, pointing out that in California less than 15 per cent of the animals are registered by sire. And, in Mississippi, only two per cent were registered in this manner.

After Blodgett stepped down, Bob Morris, director of Special Programs for the Holstein Association spoke on exporting animals on the international market. His goal was to explain to the breeders the existing conditions in the exporting business, and to make clear why certain problems exist.

One common complaint Morris tried to handle was that of price. The price of the animals is affected by transportation costs, health tests, and quarantines, he explained. Morris also told of how the animals are processed to get them ready to go overseas, adding that if an animal has ringworm or warts, "the federal government won't let them out of the country."

Then, Mike Nolan, Eastern Pa. program director for the Pa. Holstein Association, recapped the National Convention, spoke on grade identification, and the procedure of how to become a delegate to the convention.

After the brief speeches concluded, it was time to hand out the prizes for the dairy judging.

In the children's division, Susan Kulp took first place with a total of 98 points. In the women's division Carol Facey also had 98 points for a top prize, and in the men's division, Jim Shaw and Melvin Stoltzfus tied for first with another 98-point record.

The other winners in the various categories were: Children's division - 2. Victor Stoltzfus 3. Katie Yeager and Jerry Hostetter; Women's division - 2. Carol Yeager and Porcia Breckbill 3. Sue Lamborn; Men's division - 2. Mark Yeager and Donald

Kulp, children's division. Not pictured is Melvin Stoltzfus, who tied with Shaw for first place in the men's division.

Jon David Petersheim was the lucky person to win this calf at the Chester County Holstein Day. His name was picked out of a drawing containing the names of 8- to 15-year-olds.

Hettinger 3. John Stoltzfus 4. Stanley Guest.

The winners got to choose from an assortment of prizes given by 18 different contributors.

After the prizes were awarded, there was still one more prize drawing remaining - that of giving away a calf to any 8- to 15-year old. Jon David Petersheim, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elam Petersheim, Morgantown, was the lucky person whose name was drawn out of the hat. Jon's father says that his son will now be two years ahead of the rest of the family who usually get a calf to raise at the age of 12.

The calf was donated by Donal Hostetter for this special event.

The Rohrs finished topping last Monday, and the acreage that was cut had been topped three weeks before.

Rohrer said that the weather in his area was excellent this year. There was only moderate rain with never more than an inch and a half at a time, and no hail. He also mentioned that they never had rain that washed, either.

While it has been reported that the etch virus is the biggest problem this season, Rohrer did not have a particular problem with it. Nor has his crop had black shank disease or a large amount of aphids. He reported that this year's crop did have some aphids, but spraying for suckers eradicated that problem.

Overall, he predicts that he'll get about a ton to the acre this year.

According to John Yocum, manager of the Penn State Southeast Field Research Laboratory at Landisville, this estimate is conservative for the area. Yocum thinks crops should yield about 1800 pounds to a ton (per acre) this year.

Further east in the county around Witmer, cutting has also been going on, but the condition of the crop is quite different.

"Not too great" is the term one person used to describe the hail cut, wind blown tobacco that was being harvested last week.

Just as some farmers in this area were ready to start harvesting, on July 29, a vicious storm with pea-sized hail swept through the area, depositing almost three inches of rain in an hour. This left the tobacco in poor condition.

Farmers are hoping that the smaller tobacco will recover, and that a good harvest will be possible a little later on in the season.

Near Strasburg, the same storm minus the hail hit the area but left only slight damage. The worst problem was that it caused a little of the tobacco to stand crooked, but with good weather ahead, the sun should be able to draw it up again.

One farmer near Strasburg reported a severe problem with aphids at the beginning of the season, but that has all cleared up now because of sucker spraying.

Near East Petersburg, Warren Witmer, Manheim R7, also says that most of his crop is "real good," but that he has some spots that got too much water and some with possible pesticide runoff from the corn. He has not begun cutting as yet, but expects to start shortly.

"It used to be early to start cutting by the 10th of August," he remarked. "Now some people have started in July."

There are some farmers who are not ahead of schedule, however. One farmer in the Mt. Joy area reported that the replanted crops were coming along fine, but that topping was still in the future because replanting had set him back 2-2½ weeks.

Besides the early hail which damaged all the plants during the second week of June, there are other problems to contend with.

"We think now of early frost," he said. Not only that, but heavy rain has washed some sprays from the corn into the plants.

Luckily, there has been little problem with aphids, black shank or tobacco etch.

breeder and exhibitor banners at the Lancaster County Black and White Show. The top five finishers received prizes from Pennfield Corporation.

Attended by a sizable crowd in spite of excellent hay-making weather, the field day centered around just plain country pleasantries and the hospitality offered by the Maurice Welk family. The Welks' herd of Holsteins, known for performance in both the milk bucket and show ring, were scrutinized, along with the facilities. Welk houses and milks his cows in a 4-row stanchion barn.

Aside from the informal parts of the program, there were also talks by Associate County Agent N. Alan Bair, Dairy Council representative, Ray Weber; and Lancaster County's 1976 dairy princess, Deb Kreider. Bair tossed aside his planned topics of discussion and chose instead to eulogize Rep. Jerry Litton, Democrat from Missouri, whom, Bair said, had done an awful lot on behalf of agriculture. The farmer-politician and his family were killed in an airplane crash earlier this week.

Weber, a frequent visitor to dairy field days, centered his talk on the importance of nutrition. "Educate yourself so you can be a spokesman for the dairy industry," he urged. He noted that farmers know a lot about the feeding and breeding of their animals, but aren't that well versed when it comes to nutritional knowledge about the product they sell. In fact, nutrition is something which very few people knew much about until just recent years.

In addition to his own remarks on nutrition, Weber also showed a film on the subject which was produced by the Food and Drug Administration. Titled "Read the Label - Set a Better Table," the film drove home the point which farmers knew long ago: The diets of their cows are much more carefully planned than many meals in households across the country. Government and private programs are trying to change that, however, and Weber stresses that it's important for dairymen to have first-hand knowledge of their product.

Another point made by Weber is that there is "a Calcium shortage in the United States — people do not drink enough milk." Of evident concern to him is the fact that U.S. high schoolers are allowed to graduate without at least one course in nutrition. "If you eat poorly now, it may not show, but it will later," he warned.

The County's dairy princess, spoke briefly on her intentions and plans during her reign. She said she is aiming to carry her message to all people — young and old alike, and is currently preparing for the State dairy princess pageant.

Aside from numerous door prizes, there was one more prize awarded which possibly exceeded the combined value of all others.

Twelve-year old Ivan Yost, Jr. was the lucky young man who received a calf donated by Lancaster area dairyman, Jim High. A requirement is that young Yost will show the animal in upcoming 4-H or FFA shows.

WHY

TAKE ONE MINUTE TO READ THIS

IM-PRUV-ALL PRODUCTS are feed balances for the lactic acid making bacteria.

When added to the silage, it starts the ferment immediately, and in three days the total ferment is usually over. This means it made the total 1½% lactic acid in three days instead of the normal three weeks. The shorter and lower heat levels save your energy, vitamin A and digestable protein.

RECENT RESULTS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY SILAGE TEST showed that the IM-PRUV-ALL treated silage had 90 times more bacteria on the second day than the untreated.

Other studies have shown that the IM-PRUV-ALL silages many times have averaged 6-8% higher in T.D.N. It's just like feeding 6-8 pds. more grain, or you can feed 6-8 pds. less grain to achieve similar production.

disease. One variety is doing Yocum, and it may be pretty well, according to available for commercial use in two years. A few other varieties "look good" as far as disease resistance is concerned, but are poor in yield. The leaves are quite small.

According to Yocum, etch is more of a problem to Pennsylvania tobacco growers than black shank disease. Spread by aphids initially, the etch problem continues to grow via viruses. The researcher claimed he hasn't seen a single field of tobacco this year which did not have some level of infestation with the virus. Fortunately, he pointed out, the disease does not continue once the crop is hung in the shed.

John Baylor, forage crops specialist from the University, was on hand to discuss alfalfa growing problems with visitors. He noted that anthracnose has become a significant problem in the state within the past half-dozen years or so and pointed out that it is a disease which is most often found in high humidity, high temperature regions.

Quite a few alfalfa varieties are being tested, with the three showing the most promise for anthracnose tolerance in this area being WL 311, Saranac AR, and Arc. He told visitors that they should expect to keep alfalfa stands for four years.

Aside from the anthracnose problem, Baylor also expressed a good bit of concern for the potato leaf hopper which is devastating quite a few fields. The specialist explained that farmers often do not recognize the problem, since symptoms are similar to those of boron deficiency or drought. Discolorations in terms of reds and yellows take place and growth is stunted. The leaf hopper is a tiny insect which is blown in by the wind every year. One good thing, "it's easy to control through chemicals," concluded Baylor.

Angus association sponsoring new event

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. - The Liberty Bell Angus Sire Evaluation Contest, the first event of its kind sponsored by a breed association, will proclaim the results of one of the most complete and practical steer show competitions on August 19-20-21 reports Lloyd D. Miller, executive secretary of the American Angus Association, St. Joseph, Missouri. The event will be a featured part of the Iowa Expo '76's "Angus Week" held in conjunction with the Iowa State Fair, Des Moines, and will feature the progeny results of 17 Angus sires involved in the program. Other activities during the Angus Week will include the U.S. Bicentennial National Angus Show of bulls and heifers.

The Liberty Bell Contest hosts the progeny groups of 17 Angus sires all enrolled in the National Sire Evaluation part of AHIR and a total of 254 calves are now on feed at the Beukema All-Angus Feedlot east of Newton, Iowa, off Interstate 80. The groups of 10 to 12 calves by each registered Angus sire, plus a representative number of Reference Sire calves, were all born between February and May of 1975. The calves were identified at birth by the herd owner and later tattooed with a special Liberty Bell tattoo and number by regional managers of the American Angus Association.

In November of 1975 the calves were received at the Beukema Test Station where they were placed on a wintering ration. After five months wintering they will then be placed on 140-day feed test March 26 in time to complete the finishing period by the third week of August. After the gaining period, one-half of the steers will be slaughtered and the remaining calves will be kept for exhibition during a special Sire Evaluation Program at the Iowa Expo '76's "Angus Week" in Des Moines. Following the first day's activities at Des Moines, the remaining calves will be slaughtered and complete carcass data made available on the progeny groups before the show is over.

The Liberty Bell event, Miller added, is designed to allow breeders to participate in the National Sire Evaluation part of A.H.I.R. and compete for top prizes in the steer progeny competition as well. Special awards and extra publicity are being planned for the winners in the Liberty Bell Contest.

Information gathered on the progeny groups will include records of ease of calving, weaning and yearling weights, average daily gains during both the growing phase and finishing period in the feedlot, carcass quality and carcass cutability and trimmed retail cuts per day of age. Final placings will be made from this information.

Wm. Penn's work appraised

William Penn could be considered one of history's greatest real estate developers, according to an article which appeared in a special bicentennial issue of The Appraisal Journal, published by the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers.

When Penn inherited a near-worthless 16,000 pound note signed by King Charles II, he negotiated an agreement with the king to exchange the note for the states of Pennsylvania and Delaware in the New World at a price equivalent to $1 for each 564 acres. Then, before ever stepping foot on the territory, Penn sold 2 percent of his holdings, pocketing some $40,000. And, according to the article, "All of this was accomplished without ever having to file an environmental impact statement or to appear before a single planning commission."

The article, "Penn's 'Greene Countrie Towne'," by Robert W. Hall, MAI, traces development of Pennsylvania and, more particularly, of Philadelphia.

A firm believer in advertising, Penn promoted the province of Pennsylvania both in the British Isles and on the Continent through a document, "Some Account of the Province of Pennsylvania," which begins:

"Since (by the good providence of God) a country in America is fallen to my lot, I thought it not less my duty than my honest interest, to give some public notice of it to the world, that those of our own, or other nations, that are inclined to transport themselves or families beyond the seas, may find another country added to their choice, that if they shall happen to like the place, conditions, and constitutions, (so far as the present infancy of things will allow us any prospect), they may, if they please, fix with me in the province hereafter described..."

By May, 1682, Penn had sold about 565,500 acres in plots varying in size from 250 to 10,000 acres. And, in that same year, 23 boatloads of immigrants arrived in the new territory.

Pesticide outlook favorable

The pesticide outlook can be summed up in one word: favorable.

Not only are supplies ample for this year's expanded acreage, but prices have leveled off, too, according to USDA economists.

Production of all pesticides for use in 1976 should range 10-15 percent over 1975. Also helping are increased carryover supplies, estimated at 13 percent of the previous year's output, versus only 8 percent in early 1975.

Last January and February, a survey of 25 firms that produce about two-thirds of all U.S. farm pesticides revealed that production problems caused by the energy crisis and raw material shortages in 1974 and early 1975 had all but disappeared.

Fewer than 10 percent of the firms reported problems - compared with 72 percent in 1974. Most blamed inadequate capacities rather than lack of raw materials.

The price picture shows little change from last season. Manufacturers have upped their charges to dealers only modestly compared with the past 2 years. And retail list prices have inched up less than 5 percent, versus roughly 25 percent last year.

Distributors, meantime, reported that growers are paying somewhat lower prices than last year, especially for herbicides. For most producers, that's welcome relief from 1973-1975, when price tags on 10 major pesticide products shot up more than 50 percent.

On the demand side, farmers will probably use 5-10 percent more pesticides than last year. As of April 1, cotton growers planned to up their acreage by 16 percent, a move that should increase demand for cotton herbicides and insecticides by a similar amount. More modest increases expected for corn, sorghum, and wheat will also stimulate pesticide sales.

Prospects look good for next year as well. Manufacturers revealed plans to expand production capacity by 10-15 percent this year and 5-10 percent in 1977.

Heat detection 'stepped up'

RALEIGH, N.C. - The pedometers that hikers use to measure the distances they walk, are being used in research to detect estrus (heat) in dairy cows. Dr. Charles A. Kiddy, an animal scientist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service, has found via a pedometer strapped to the cow's leg that she is much more active when in heat than when she is not.

Dr. Kiddy monitored the activity of 40 dairy cows wearing pedometers at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center in Maryland. The cows were fitted with pedometers about 30 days after calving. Special cases were designed to protect the instruments and allow for easy reading. Readings were recorded for all cows each time they were milked.

An increase in activity averaging four times that of normal was noted during estrus. Since the activity of the cows as recorded by the pedometers, tended to vary little from day to day, the increased reading during estrus was easily detected. When an increase in the cow's activity was noted in the morning, she was bred that afternoon; when her activity increased in the afternoon, she was bred the following morning.

This system proved highly effective in selecting cows for breeding. In 92 per cent of the estrus periods observed, the cows were at least twice as active as they otherwise were.

Dr. Kiddy believes that monitoring the activity of dairy cows as a means of detecting estrus would be practical for commercial dairy farms. Further research is planned for dairy cows milked under a variety of conditions and climates.

Research will also be conducted on the use of electronic equipment for monitoring the activity of cows.

Dr. Kiddy presented his research before the 71st Annual Meeting of the American Dairy Science Association.

Project winners named

GETTYSBURG - Seven Adams County 4-H members have been selected as Keystone Winners in nine different project areas. Named winners were: Kathy Hall, Littlestown R2, in Recreation and Bicycle; Carol Zepp, New Oxford R2, in Photography, and Citizenship; Ellyn Tannenbaum, 323 Pine St., Gettysburg, Conservation; Patricia Reinhart, Agriculture and her sister Nancy, Dairy Foods, both of Gettysburg R6; Don Brown, Hanover R1, Swine; Mary Ann Klinger, New Oxford R2, Clothing. Mary Ann Klinger was also selected as one of the top ten 4-H girls in Pennsylvania.

Keystone winners are state finalists in the National Awards Program sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service and business and industry. These members were interviewed on July 30 at Penn Stae along with Keystone winners from other counties in Pennsylvania. Based on their 4-H records and the interview, a state winner will be named in over 30 different project areas. Members are scored on their project records, participation in 4-H events and activities, leadership responsibilities, citizenship and participation in community and school activities.

Field day scheduled

NEWARK, Del. — This year's University of Delaware annual Farm and Home Field Day is scheduled for Wednesday, August 11, at the Georgetown Substation. The event features tours of the crop research plots which are located on the 310-acre farm.

A special bicentennial feature of the event will be an exhibit recreating an aspect of colonial farm life. Also included in the day's activities are agricultural exhibits, a homemaker's crafts program, and a fried chicken dinner. A plant diagnostic clinic will operate throughout the day to help Field Day visitors with plant problems. Activities start at 10 a.m. and conclude with a watermelon break at 4.

area. Some fields are suitable only to permanent pasture and if the grass stand is mostly weeds or non-productive grass varieties, the old sod may be killed with a herbicide or mechanically killed in order to establish a new stand. Lime and fertilizer should be applied according to a complete soil test and if the new mixture is seeded by early September, more beef or milk should be realized from the area next summer. The 1976 Agronomy Guide will give suggestions covering seeding mixtures and rates.

TO GUARD AGAINST HOG CHOLERA

Another outbreak of hog cholera has been reported in

New Jersey and possibly other New England states. The authorities are on top of the infection and we hope it is brought under control before further spreading. This is a warning to all local producers to continue to be careful with their sanitation practices and in buying additional animals; be sure new animals have official health papers and come from healthy herds. Uncooked garbage continues to be a source of infection; we urge all hog producers to be sure that local hogs are not fed garbage unless it is thoroughly cooked. Raw meat scraps fed to hogs (especially pork) is very dangerous and should not be done.

The schedule includes: Thursday - entering and

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

It's a great feeling to know that you are the master of your farmlands . . . that when you treat your soil right, it will treat you right. Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range. By raising the pH from a level below 6.0 to 6.5 or higher, you can expect to harvest .8 more tons of alfalfa per acre, with similar increases for all other forage and cash crops.

what's causing these radical price changes.

Reports indicate that there is presently a lot of soybean meal and oil on hand, domestic consumption is down, and crushings have slowed down as a result. Hence, a comparatively slow market.

In view of low cattle prices, the lowered feed costs are at least a welcome happening to those buying soybean meal.

A lot of good steers were bought for 35 to 36 cents a pound at Lancaster County auctions during the past two weeks. Jim Anderson, livestock market reporter for the County's several auctions, noted that markets for the early part of the week were down to $34.50 to $36.25 per hundredweight for choice and prime animals. As of Thursday they had picked up a few cents and good cattle were bringing $35.25 to $37.50.

Vintage reported that their low for the year was this past Tuesday when one exceptionally fine steer brought just $38.25. A total of 1103 head of cattle were sold that day, with most of the good ones bringing just 35 to 36 cents a pound.

Ken Smoker, who handles some of the managerial responsibilities at the sale barn, noted that good cows were bringing as high as 30 cents a pound. "People are eating a lot of beef," Smoker said, "but instead of good steaks, they're going to McDonald's and Gino's for hamburgers." This is one reason, he believes, why cattle prices are hurting the way they are.

Smoker expressed disappointment that the price of meat in the store has not reflected the drops seen at the auctions. "They stores should lower their prices to give the farmers a reason to be happier," he concluded.

Abe Diffenbach, manager of the New Holland Sales Stables, described the market at his facilities as "good to strong" in comparison to a week ago. Prices, he said, were not necessarily all that much better, but they hadn't gone any lower, and that was a reason for a bit of optimism. The veteran cattleman said he had just been out West last week to see for himself what's going on. He found small beef operators to be short in supply of cattle, while the large lots were still pretty well stocked. Once the heavy cattle which are burdening the market now are "burned away," some improvement in prices may be expected. "People are spending more money on unnecessary items and at the end of their pay check they have nothing left to buy good meat," Dieffenbach exclaimed.

Anderson, who has been a livestock market reporter for 16 years — in Lancaster County since 1964 — noted that 183,000 more hogs were killed nationally this past week, in comparison to the corresponding week in 1975. Hence, hog prices have taken a beating too. The beef kill, nationally, is also up from a year ago.

Young farmers picnic and elect officers

ELVERSON - The Twin Valley Young Farmers held their annual chicken barbecue and picnic at the home of Frank and Ruth Houck last Saturday evening, July 31. Sixty-one people attended.

Titus Kurtz asked the blessing. Gary, Sharon, Frank, and Irene Stoltzfus barbecued and served the chicken. Families completed the menu with covered dishes and desserts.

The Houck family provided recreation in the form of volleyball, swimming, and croquet.

At dusk a short business meeting was held. Mr. Wayne Lutz, Young Farmer advisor, distributed information on the new OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) rules and regulations. The new machine guarding requirements and the necessity of briefing workers on the safety of farm equipment were stressed. All members were urged to attend Ag Progress Days in Centre County on August 25 and 26.

The highlight of the business meeting was the election of officers for 1976-77. Elected were: Frank Stoltzfus, president; Gary Stoltzfus, vice-president; and Titus Beam, secretary-treasurer.

The United States has become the world's bread basket for many reasons:

The eastern half of the Nation was settled by people who carved their homes out of the wilderness and owned the land. The Homestead Act of 1862 and two previous laws made tens of millions of acres of western land available to families willing to farm the land. Thus, the farm in this country became an economic unit owned by the farmer, with the farm family doing the managing. The family was driven by a strong incentive to go all-out to make it productive. In Europe, a man was either born to the land or never owned it. In America, a man could own his land if he were willing to work it.

If we produced today's food supply with the efficiency and techniques available at the time of World War 1, we'd need 7 times as many farmworkers - 31 million instead of today's 4.4 million. One person out of three in today's urban labor force would need to leave his job and go back to the farm. The present products and services produced by that one out of three would be lost.

AGRI-KING
KEY TO PROFIT

IT'S TIME AGAIN TO START THINKING ABOUT GETTING THE MOST PROFIT FROM YOUR CORN SILAGE.

Don't let hot or sour corn silage rob you of digestible protein, energy, vitamins and palatability.

This?

or This?

(20 x 60)
Approximate protein and energy
value of 440 tons corn silage testing 50% moisture equals
$6,437.00

(20 x 60)
Approximate protein and energy
value of 500 tons corn silage
testing 70% moisture equals
$10,575.00.

Approximate protein and energy
value of one acre corn silage testing 50% moisture and yielding 16.4 tons per acre equals
$240.00.

Approximate protein and energy
value of one acre corn silage
testing 70% moisture and yielding 20 tons per acre equals $423.00.

Approximate protein and energy value of 41 ton load of corn silage testing 50% moisture
equals $60.00.

Approximate protein and energy value of a 5 ton load of corn
silage testing 70% moisture
equals $105.00

The above examples show approximate difference in the value of low moisture and high moisture corn silage.

Energy and protein values are based on soybean meal at $200.00 per ton and corn at $150 per bushel.

Values reflect difference in yield per acre, silo capacity, net energy, digestible protein and animal performance as reflected by university research

Grow the protein and energy you need, and save the energy and protein you grow!

HOW? MAKE CORN SILAGE "THE AGRI-KING WAY" AND TREAT IT WITH SIL-O-KING

1000 NEW JERSEY, WISCONSIN and CANADIAN

LARGEST SELECTION OF TOP NEW JERSEY, WISCONSIN AND CANADIAN COWS AND HEIFERS IN THE COUNTRY
BOTH REGISTERED AND GRADES

Both close springers and fresh cows are available as you want them. I will help you improve your herd to higher production and butterfat. DHIA Records I am interested in building up a good reputation with the dairy farmers of your community

I follow the breeding of the good herds in New Jersey, Wisconsin, and Canada and know the cows and heifers that do well. To get the top notch cattle in New Jersey, Wisconsin and Canada, I have learned to buy the cattle they do not want to sell. I do not buy any cattle that are for sale. As I am in business alone, I can afford to sell at a more reasonable price. Price — $25.00 less per head than the going price of top Cows
I try to price cows at what the dairyman can afford

YOU ARE CALLING THE RIGHT MAN WHEN YOU CALL ME

If it is your desire, you can come and look at the cows in New Jersey, or if you cannot come, I will send them direct to you. If you prefer, I will also come to your farm and work out the deal. Several dairymen have called me by phone and asked for good cows. They said they did not have time to drive to my place. We arranged by phone that I would select the cows and send them direct to them. We have never met personally, other than our conversation by phone and I have made satisfied customers in this manner. We are a firm that does honest business.

Call me by Phone and Reverse Charges or Write Me and Give your Phone Number

CASH OR CREDIT CAN BE ARRANGED WITH A DOWN PAYMENT.

The cows that I have brought into your state have made me many friends among the dairymen. Call me and I will do the same for you

Very Good (87) Production Qualified 5-75

"Loren" is siring long, sharp cattle. His daughters are very typical in general conformation and appearance to that of his sire, Osbornedale Ivanhoe. Loren is one of the outstanding sires of feet and legs at SELECT SIREs, with legs having enough bone and correct set to the hock. Udders are quite desirable in quality with some variation in shape. Loren combines high milk yield with high butterfat test, resulting in a high "dollar difference" over herd mates. Use Loren for improved stature, length, butterfat test, and foot and leg conformation.

Peach grower's wife gives hints and recipes

By SUSAN KAUFFMAN

Clinging to the hills off Route 472 near Black Rock, Lancaster County, seven miles southeast of Quarryville and eight miles northwest of Oxford is Groff's Orchard. The 60 acres of fruit trees have no large billboard advertisements, and a newcomer would need to be given directions on how to get there. However, Groff Brothers need no advertisement other than word of mouth from customers. At this time of year, conversations on their busy phone concern Jubilee peaches, sweet corn, and cantaloupes. One cheerful store tender at Groff's Orchard is Carlton's wife, Carol who gladly gave information about the varieties of peaches and two delicious sounding recipes for fresh peaches.

Groff Brothers is owned by Carlton and Jim Groff. They bought their father's 220 acre farm in 1968 and expanded the orchard part to 60 acres. In the course of expanding they replaced and added mainly peaches and apples. They also have cherries, pears, plums, and garden produce such as strawberries, cantaloupes, cabbage and cauliflower.

Most of Groff Brothers' customers call before they drive out to the orchard because the demand runs fairly even with their supply. Answering the phone becomes an all day job for those who work in the store. Linda Groff, Jim's wife, and Carol, Carlton's wife, are the two chief store tenders.

Carol and Carlton were both math teachers at Solanco for a number of years before becoming full time orchard growers. Their background in logic and in using numbers undoubtedly aids them in operating a business of this sort. A great deal of planning for years ahead and for scientific use of chemicals such as fertilizers and sprays are necessary for the survival of a continuing orchard.

This year, for instance, Groff Brothers planted 1000 peach trees in order to have a pick-your-own peach business in production three years from now. Groffs plant a two-year-old root stock in the Spring which looks like and is called a whip. This slender whip may grow enough during the first year to produce one peach the next year. By the third year the tree may produce a basket of peaches and by the fifth year be in full production.

Orchardists don't just sit back and wait out the next three or four years after planting. They must prune the trees each winter and spray every week to ten days from the time the shoots push through the bark in the early spring until picking time. Carlton spends 20 to 25 hours every week spraying those 60 acres.

In addition to pruning and spraying the trees, the ground under and between the trees must be mowed, harrowed, and sprayed with weed killer.

Carol explained that spraying is a must even for backyard orchards and pruning is needed to open up the tree so sunshine and air reach the fruit in the middle of the tree. Peach trees in the past have been pruned so that no central growth remains. The trees are trimmed to be wide-spreading and low. At one program for orchard growers, Carol saw films of Russian orchards where large trees were trained to wire trellises much like grape vines. She suggests that a plentiful labor force in Russia may make such time consuming and exacting trimming possible. However, some trimming is necessary to maintain healthy, strong limbs and good-sized, quality fruit. While talking about backyard orchards, Carol said the dwarf trees which their orchard does not grow are probably ideal for small areas because they can be planted six feet apart while the standard trees in commercial orchards can be as much as 22 feet apart. Also, the dwarfs are lower to the ground and are therefore easier to pick.

Carol listed some of the many varieties of peaches which are old favorites along with their outstanding characteristics.

The Alberta, once very popular but now going out of demand, was the variety used in commercial canning. It is a solid peach which cans well but lacks the flavor of the newer varieties.

The Hale is known for its large size. It is a big, beautiful, red-skinned peach with red around the pit. It is not a hardy peach, and orchard growers prefer more prolific trees.

The Golden Jubilee is a very popular canning peach because it slips its skin so easily and is the right size to can without slicing the halves. It is also an excellent producer and, thus, popular with fruit growers. Carol Groff says it

My Thoughts and Welcome to Them

(With apologies to James Thurber)

There's a reason for this column's name

By JOANNE SPAHR

Nobody ever says, "Oh, hello, it's a pleasure to meet you," when they are introduced to me for the first time. Instead, they screw up their faces, give me a funny look, and say, "Who is that Jim guy you apologize to in the headline of your column?"

Everybody always thinks it's a mistake which I keep repeating week after week, but I intended the headline to read the way it does, and I still do. Now, however, I think it is time for a word of explanation.

When I came out of high school and headed to college, I had dreams of being a humorist. I was going to be a female Art Buchwald or another Erma Bombeck, or maybe just independently wealthy from writing all my funny stories as a freelancer and from being paid enormous sums of money as people clamored for my work. Then, slowly, the undeniable truth set in — I just wasn't a comedian

My kind of humor is the kind where "you had to be there", as my brother puts it, to really enjoy it. That's the way most people's humor is, but when you aspire to make a fortune off it, there is a slight problem involved.

So, I began looking around for other areas of writing, and came up with ag journalism, because that's the background I came from, and what I could probably enjoy the most.

However, I never lost the dream of being the type of writer who could give others enjoyment through laughter, and as a result, I kept up my reading and studying of humorists.

Then, one day in American literature class, I stumbled upon James Thurber to whom I've more or less dedicated this column. He was funny, to say the least, which is what a good humorist is supposed to be, and I liked him.

As I read one Thurber anthology from beginning to end, I came across a story which had real "social significance," as the saying was at that time, to me. It was in a section entitled "University Days" and was about Haskins, a bumbling, boring agricultural journalist who went into writing for ag just in case his farming career went to the dogs. Unfortunately for him, he should have stuck with farming, because he couldn't write. And, on top of it all, the poor guy had one of the biggest "beats" in school since the university had a large ag school.

The journalist-farmer did know animals, however, but his stories were boring and he took all afternoon on one at a time, because he had to hunt for each letter on the typewriter.

The editor was constantly annoyed with him, but decided to give him one more chance by sending him out to the horse pavilions for a story which was

Peach grower's wife

is popular for its ease in canning mechanics but it does lack the flavor of many other peaches.

The Belle of Georgia, the last of the four older varieties Carol mentioned, is the most popular white peach. It is small in size but very sweet.

"There is no other peach as sweet as the Belle of Georgia," says Carol. "When the Belle is in season, the aroma in the store room is almost too sweet to stand!" she adds.

The Belle is a good bearer, but orchards do not raise many of them because the white peach is an oddity for most customers. They may buy several baskets of yellow peaches and one, if any, of the white peach.

"The white peach is like the purple cabbage," quipped Carol Groff. "Purple cabbage tastes the same as green; it's the color that bothers people."

In the case of the white Belle of Georgia peach, the taste is sweeter than the yellow peach.

Some newer varieties of peaches are the Sun High, "a really good canner and producer"; the Loring, much like the Sun High; and the Red Skin family — the late Red Skin bears in September for those who put off canning until the last minute.

For the shopper who is buying peaches, Carol Groff gives this information. The early yellow peaches are all clingstones and for ease in pitting must be allowed to set for several days before use. Peaches are at their lowest prices usually during the peak of production when the supply is the greatest. The early and late varieties are usually higher in price when the demand is greater than the supply.

In the storeroom at Groff's Orchard is a bulletin board for recipe exchanges.

"Many customers hurry over to it to see what is new but few remember to bring their own favorite recipes to put up," Carol remarked. She gives two recipes that are her favorites:

Peach Roll

- 3 cups peaches, sliced
- 2 cups flour
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- 1 cup sour milk
- 3 teaspoons baking powder

Mix the flour, shortening, baking powder and milk together and roll into a rectangle. Cover with peaches and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll into a long roll, slice, and place in a baking dish. Cover with the following syrup:

- 1 cup water
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon flour

Bake in 400-degree F oven for 10 minutes. Reduce to 375 degrees F and bake as a pie. Serve warm with milk like dumplings.

Sour Cream Peach Pie

One unbaked pie shell
Fill shell with one layer of fresh halved peaches.
Add pieces between the halves.

- Beat:
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon vanilla

Pour sour cream mixture over peaches. Bake at 425 degrees F for 15 minutes. Turn back oven to 375 degrees F for 30 minutes.

When freezing peaches for her family of four, which consists of Carl and her two daughters — Debra, four-years-old, and Kristen, seven-weeks-old — Carol does not use preservatives except in the instance of white peaches which otherwise will turn brown when they thaw. She slices the peaches and sprinkles sugar over them as if she were going to serve them right away. She freezes small quantities in each container, only enough for one meal. "After all," she says, "you'd only slice enough fresh peaches for one meal at a time. Leftovers, whether thawed, frozen or fresh sliced, are not as good as just sliced or just thawed," Carol continues.

When canning peaches, Carol uses a light to medium syrup and cold packs them, leaving a pit or two in each jar to improve the flavor.

In her leisure moments which come in the winter when she is tending the store, Carol enjoys crewel work, knitting, reading, string art, and sewing. Her crewel pictures range from flowers to mushrooms and beach scenes "Any design at all is alright with me," she says.

She sews mainly for herself, and recently learned to knit afghans and sweaters. Her ambition is to make a quilt some day. She has helped to make quilts at the June Smith Center in Gap but has not tackled one by herself as yet.

"It is such a big project to do by myself in odd moments; I'd probably never get it done," she sighed.

Carol is an active member of Farm Women 31, the Women's Committee of PFA, and the choir at Middle Octorara Church. Carl belongs to several fruit growers associations, the Solanco Fair Board, having served as president, and for the last five years handled the PFA newsletter which was mailed to as many as 1500 members.

The Groffs are busy people, and they will be busier every day now that the peaches and corn and cantaloupes are peaking their production.

There's a reason supposed to be "lively" and "something everyone would want to read."

What he came back with, however, was a 200-word article about horse diseases that began with the line, "Who has noticed the sores on the tops of the horses in the animal husbandry building?"

That's where Thurber's story ends, and it is left up to the reader to decide whether Haskins sank or swam in the newspaper business. I've always hoped that he swam, but I have a feeling that from that infamous first line, he may have sunk.

I think of that story often when I go to write an opening line of a story and as I make corrections on my copy for all the times my fingers have hit the wrong keys I can really empathize with Haskins.

I also notice that sometimes my writing bears a strong resemblance to Thurber's. That happens many times when a person becomes enamored with someone else, and they begin to copy their hero's style. So, when I went to write a headline for this column, I entitled it, "My Thoughts and Welcome to Them," and suddenly realized that this was a paraphrase of one of Thurber's works, My World and Welcome to it. And, I also knew that on occasion, I would try my hand at humor, and would also have a few Haskins-like stories to my name. So, I didn't change the headline since it fit so well, but rather apologized for my feeble attempts at humor and gave credit to the author who inspired the title, and the writer, as well.

Separated tomato juice is safe

UNIVERSITY PARK - Home canning tomato juice that has separated is perfectly safe - it's just not appetizing until you shake the jar before serving, says Mrs. Velma C. Musser, Cooperative Extension Service home economist. You don't always prevent the separation but these suggestions may minimize the problem:

Quickly boil the tomatoes five minutes right after cutting and before making the juice. Prolonged heating of the juice before it's filled into jars increases separation.

Avoid using watery, over-mature or soft fruit. Always hot pack tomato juice - heat to boiling before filling jars and then heat process according to modern directions.

The Indians were the new world's original farmers, and had been farming for centuries prior to the arrival of Columbus. They raised corn, tomatoes, potatoes, beans, squash, yams, and other crops. Yet when the first English colonists arrived in 1607, the Indians barely subsisted, even though practically all of their activity was spent in getting food.

The Range

This is peach season, as we all know, and in recognition of a new cookbook compiled and edited by an area woman, Mrs. Gail McPherson, most of the recipes featured this week have been taken from her first-of-a-kind edition, The Passion For Peaches Cookbook. Over 20 York County residents were contributors to the recipe collection and six local kitchens tested the recipes not pulled from National Peach Council files. Illustrated are nearly 300 different ways to make up peaches. For this column's featured recipes, the majority are family favorites of the McPhersons with a few from the National Peach Council.

xxx
In two weeks Lancaster Farming will be featuring corn recipes. In order to get them all to us in time, an August 14 deadline has been set. So, you still have a week to send them in. A tomato recipe deadline has also been set. If you have any tomato recipes you really enjoy and would like to share them with us, mail them by August 18. Other seasonal recipes will also be appreciated. One particular vegetable which has been neglected by

"Home on the Range" contributors is squash. If enough recipes come in, this could also be featured one week.

MAIN DISHES

Peachyque Pork
10-12 unpeeled fresh peaches
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup soy sauce
one-third cup honey
1 large clove garlic minced
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon pepper
About 6 pounds pork roast
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind

Cut 4 or 5 fresh peaches in half; remove pits. Crush or buzz in blender to make 2 cups pulp. Blend 1 cup pulp with 1 tablespoon of the lemon juice. Cover and refrigerate until needed for sauce. Mix rest of peach pulp, rest of lemon juice, soy sauce, honey, garlic, ginger and pepper. Pour over meat. Let stand several hours, turning several times. Drain; save marinade. Secure meat on spit. Cook over low coals about 3 hours, or until meat thermometer registers 185°F. During last half hour, baste often with marinade. Cut rest of peaches in half; remove pits. Lay halves on double thickness of foil. Sprinkle with lemon rind. Brush with marinade. Put on grill under roast about 20 to 30 minutes before roast is done. Serve as garnish with roast. Add reserved 1 cup peach pulp-lemon juice mixture to remaining marinade. Heat and serve with meat. Makes 12 servings.

xxx Fresh Peach Ham Loaf

2 pounds ground cured ham
1 pounds ground fresh pork
1 cup cracker crumbs (or bread crumbs can be used)
¼ cup chopped green pepper (or 1 tablespoon dehydrated green pepper)
¼ teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon seasoning salt

¼ teaspoon seasoning pepper
2 beaten eggs
¾ cup canned milk plus water to make 1 cup
2-3 fresh peaches, sliced
Combine all ingredients, except fresh peaches, in a large bowl. Mix thoroughly. Using a 2½ quart casserole (or a decorative mold could be used), place a layer of sliced fresh peaches in the bottom. Add half the ham loaf mixture carefully so as not to move the peach slices. Press down and to the sides. Add another layer of fresh peach slices then the rest of the ham loaf mixture. Again press down. Bake at 350°F 1 to 1½ hours or until brown on top. Serves approximately 8.

Dress-Up For Baked Ham

AGWAY

How to make more milk from the same amount of feed

The "balanced bite" is one key
The Schwartz Mixer Wagon is the other

Cows vary greatly in their individual preferences for one forage over another. So while some of your cows may be getting the diet they need to maintain peak production, others may be short-changing themselves . . . getting plenty of protein perhaps, but not enough energy to balance it. What can you do about it?

The Agway Total Mixed Ration

TMR is the best way yet devised for feeding a ration that's perfectly balanced for nutrient content. It eliminates cows' preferences.

But TMR feeding can be no better than the equipment used to mix the ration. Accurate measuring and thorough mixing are musts.

Most versatile way to feed TMR ...the Schwartz Mixer Wagon

It accurately proportions, thoroughly mixes, then transports and distributes nutrients in any prescribed amount and formulation. So it's easy to feed the right ration any place on your farm.

Triple augers tumble and turn feed end to end to perfectly blend liquid, granular or pelleted supplements into silage, chopped hay or ground grain. Five to seven minutes does the job. Controls are convenient—and positive. Solid construction assures trouble-free operation. Three sizes to choose from.

An Agway salesman will be happy to discuss TMR with you. He can also arrange a demonstration of the Schwartz Mixer Wagon. Call Agway today.

Cheese imports down

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that imports of cheese licensed under Section 22 quotas of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, declined during 1975 for the second year in a row.

The Department's annual report on imports of cheese and other dairy products showed use of licenses issued against the quotas for cheese amounted to 70 per cent of the total allocation, compared to 75 per cent in 1974 and 87 per cent in 1973.

The purpose of the quotas is to prevent imports from materially interfering with the U.S. dairy support program.

Lower quota utilization was due primarily to the unstable price situation resulting from general inflationary pressures and to counter-vailing duty actions affecting important supplying countries. These actions, directed against foreign subsidies, have resulted in the removal or substantial reduction of subsidies on exports to the United States for most industrial cheeses as well as other cheeses used for further processing, such as Swiss cheese.

High prices held imports of the "pricebreak" cheeses (Swiss or Emmentaler; Gruyere-process cheeses; and the basket category of Other cheeses) to an average utilization of only 61 per cent the quotas. For these categories, when the f.o.b. price exceeds the "pricebreak" level, quotas do not apply and import licenses are not required. Although price rises may in some cases merely have shifted transactions from quota to nonquota status, the total volume of "pricebreak" cheese imports (quota and nonquota combined) decreased substantially.

Imports under other cheese quotas also reflected the price and demand situation. Imports of processed Edam and Gouda cheeses, a traditional low-use quota item, were only 23 per cent of the quota due to short supplies, high prices and lack of demand. By contrast, each of the quotas for Italian-type cheese and for Blue-mold cheese were 86 per cent utilized, and 94 per cent of the Edam and Gouda quota was used.

As usual, utilization of the comparatively small quotas for Cheddar and for American-type cheeses other than Cheddar was near the quota limits - 95 and 98 per cent, respectively.

From Flushing to Lenhartsville — a city girl comes to the farm

By JUDY MITCHELL
Berks Co. Reporter
LENHARTSVILLE - As the numbers of farmers who produce the food for our continuously growing populations diminish, concern about young people leaving the farms each year to seek outside employment increases. It now appears, however, that at least a small percentage of city youth may be moving in to help fill the gap. Over a year ago, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Haas of Lenhartsville saw an article in an agricultural publication about a New York City school that offers a program for a select group of high school students interested in a career in agriculture. One requirement for completing the course was that students spend at least two summers working on a farm. The idea appealed to them, Haas said because here were kids who really wanted to get into the dust and dirt and find out what farming was really like.

The Haas's subsequently contacted the John Bowne High School in Flushing New York, but learned that all students had already been placed for the summer of '75. Although they have three grown children of their own (Paul, age 23, Emily 22, and Cathy 18) still living and helping in the operation of the family farm, the idea of having an ag student from a city school spend a summer with them stuck, and this year the Haas's again made application to John Bowne and were given the name of Linda Guagliano.

Linda and her mother visited the Haas farm during the Easter vacation, and according to Haas, after only a few hours they seemed like old friends. It was agreed that Linda would spend the summer living and working with the Haas family. (According to the school regulations, the host family pays a first year ag student $25 and a second year student $35 for work performed.)

Seventeen-year-old Linda, who appeared as comfortable in her bib overalls as any Pennsylvania farm girl might, explained that she had entered the ag program at John Bowne in her sophomore year. Linda belongs to what might be considered an elite group at her school, Haas pointed out, because, unlike here in Pennsylvania, students wishing to enroll in John Bowne's ag program are tested and personally interviewed prior to acceptance. Once in the program, the ag students must maintain a high grade average or, according to Linda, "you're out."

Linda is one of about 60 ag students entering their senior year at Queens County High School, which numbers approximately 200 ag students in all.

Linda's summer at the Haas's completes the course requirement for two summers of work experience, preceded by one summer at the school's land lab. The two blowers in one

Compare this blower to conventional blowers. The Gehl FB99 has staggered fan blades, six on each side of the rotor. They actually give you two blowers in one. The timed delivery of material from alternate paddles provides maximum use of available space in the nine inch pipe. Result is increased capacity. Alternate paddles provide a steadier flow of air and material. Pressure and velocity is maintained as material is blasted up the pipe. No gaps. No slowdowns. No more silo bottlenecks.

School has four acres of land, she explained, and before going to work on an actual farm, students are assigned a 15 x 15 foot lot which they are responsible for tending from the initial preparation of the soil through the harvest of whatever crop they elect to grow.

Having put in her time at the land lab at the end of her sophomore year, Linda spent last summer working on a farm near Beach Lake in Wayne County, Pa.

Asked how she likes working on a farm as compared to her ag studies in school, Linda replied emphatically, "I like working much better." Practical experience, she pointed out, is so much different from the work at school which "goes strictly by the book."

Because of the absence of farms in the area, opportunity for practical experience, particularly with farm animals, is limited during the city students' school year.

"We do get extensive training in ag mechanics though," Linda said, because the school has a lot of equipment there to work with.

The ag department also keeps about 500 chickens, in cages Linda noted, and sells the eggs and the produce grown at the school out of the ag office.

So far this summer, Linda has gained a considerable range of practical experience at the Haas farm. She regularly tends the family's calves, which she says she really enjoys "but it gets messy sometimes when they get loose." She has mowed hay and even forked manure, Haas pointed out, and just the night before this interview, helped with a calving.

"Last night I thought she was going to head back to New York," Haas remarked, "but she didn't."

Complications set in after the cow gave birth, and although a veterinarian was fortunately on hand to meet the crisis, according to Haas, Linda stayed right with it and even held the cow's tail while the vet worked.

"I could take that with no problem," Linda said easily, "and I could take a lot worse."

Linda, who would like to someday own her own farm, rolled her big blue eyes skyward at the question of how city parents react to their daughter's announcement that she wants to be a farmer.

"They were really surprised," she said.

Although neither of her parents object to her decision, Linda believes that her mother, who was born and raised on a farm in Germany, is particularly pleased.

It is difficult to determine exactly how a city youth becomes attracted to farming as a way of life, but for Linda, at least, it seems to have had a lot to do with the summers spent at Beach Lake while she was growing up. The Guagliano's own a small farm near Beach Lake where they go each summer "and sometimes in the winter," Linda added, "whenever we can get away."

Her father works winters in a city bakery but has worked summers at a Jewish camp at Beach Lake since 1958, she explained, "that is why he bought the house." According to Linda, she spent a lot of time during those summers hanging around a nearby farm where the Guagliano's bought their milk.

Linda, a seasoned traveler who plans on making her third trip to Germany next summer - her second extended stay in Germany alone - claims she doesn't get homesick, and Mr. Haas observed that "she really seems to like it here and has just made herself at home." Mrs. Haas suggested that a question of how Linda likes Pennsylvania food was in order, and Linda readily expressed her fondness for certain foods like dried beef gravy, ham and green beans, and new brown potatoes, which she said she'd never tasted before coming here. From all appearances, Linda is one city girl who has taken to farm life as the old saying goes, "like a duck to water." And as for the Haas family, they seem to be enjoying having her as much as she enjoys being there.

Area sewers to take part in state competition

By JOANNE SPAHR

CAMP HILL — Four Lancaster County sewers and one Lebanon county girl were among the top seven junior and senior division winners named at the Capitol Region Dress Revue held at the Penn Harris Motor Inn, on July 29. Of these seven blue ribbon winners, only the four seniors will go on to represent the region at the statewide 4-H Dress Revue to be held August 10 at 4-H State Achievement Days.

Maureen Doyle, Elizabethtown R4, and Cathy

Brubaker, Running Pump Road, Lancaster, are the two Lancaster County seamstresses who will compete in Schwab Auditorium on the University Park Campus at Penn State.

Lisa Weaver, 327 North St., McSherriptown, Adams Co., and Ellen Tannenbaum, 323 Pine St., Gettysburg, will also represent the Capitol Region.

The outfits the girls will be wearing are quite varied. Cathy Brubaker's outfit is a blue denim suit with a six-gore skirt, and Maureen Doyle's creation is a gray flannel pantsuit with tucked pants and blazer accented by a striped vest.

Ellen Tannenbaum will be modeling a pale blue all-weather raincoat that is belted at the waist, and a pair of navy slacks to accompany the raincoat.

A hip-length white vinyl jacket with a detachable collar and cuffs in imitation lamb's fur is part of Lisa Weaver's garments. Underneath the jacket she sports an apple green gaberdine vest with slacks to match. To add the finishing touch, she also has a multi-colored cotton gauze blouse.

These girls will be taking part in the dress revue with 35 other 4-Hers from all areas of the state. The top winner of the state dress revue will represent Pennsylvania at the National 4-H Congress in Chicago on Nov. 28 - Dec. 2. Seven others will be named to an honors group.

The six senior semifinalists from the Capitol Region are Laurie Leaman, Lancaster Co., Chris De Palmer, York Co., Pam Barnhart, Franklin Co., Sue Geesey, York Co., Marianne Villa, Dauphin Co., and Laurel Ort, Cumberland Co.

While there were also six junior division winners named at the regional competition on July 29, these girls do not compete at states. Blue ribbon winners were Judy Weaver, Lancaster Co., and Susan Howell, Lancaster Co. Wendy Bowman, Lebanon Co., is also in the top three.

Junior alternates were Wendi Pooler, Cumberland Co., Michelle Landis, Franklin Co., and Jennifer Bishop, Adams Co.

The schedule of events for the regional competition included morning and afternoon entertainment. The morning entertainment was

Junior Cooking Edition

Since Lancaster Farming asked for corn and other vegetable recipes for Junior Cooking Edition, a lot have come in. Thank you, Junior Cooks.

However, in case you didn't have time to send in your favorites as yet, don't worry, you still have a week to get them to us. As long as Lancaster Farming has the recipes by August 14, you can have your recipe printed.

This week's recipes are all delicious-sounding desserts which are perfect any time of the year, but most of them are especially good in the summer.

Fruit Pie

1 quart fruit
1 cup sugar
1-1/4 cup water
2 tablespoons clear jelly
3/4 cup water
Pinch salt
1 tablespoon gelatine
Whipped topping

Place the quart of fruit (blueberries, strawberries, raspberries, or peaches) in baked pie crust. Heat sugar and 1-1/4 cup water. Crush some fruit and put into mixture to give color. Mix the two tablespoons clear jelly with 1/4 cup water and pinch of salt and add to above mixture to thicken. Take off stove and add 1 tablespoon gelatine soaked in 1/2 cup water. When slightly cool, pour over fruit in crust and top with whipped topping.

Then came the awaited event — the Dress Revue Fashion Show and presentation of awards.

The theme for this year's regional dress revue was "Regional U.S.A.". The judges were Miss Kaye Allen, home economics teacher, Harrisburg Middle School; Marcia Lamoreaux, assistant manager of Joann's Fabrics, Colonial Park Mall; Lillian Kopp, home economist; Jane McCurdy, sales representative, Leiter Designer Fabrics; and Robin Neidig, home economics teacher, Middletown High School.

Society of Farm Women 24 met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Witmer, New Holland R3, for a family picnic. Approximately 25 members and their families enjoyed a covered dish meal.

Mrs. Jack Golston, president, held a very short meeting for the women while the children and husbands enjoyed games.

The August meeting will be held at Mrs. Lynn Smoker, Kinzers, and roll call will be "Your Horoscope sign?"

As individuals move up the income scale, they eat more fruits, vegetables, protein (in the form of meat and milk), processed, and exotic foods. They move up the nutritional scale from starches to fats to proteins. These people are better nourished. The variety of foods gives them more vitamins and trace minerals. Eating becomes an experience. After food needs are met, they can use the rest of their income for other things. They can dress better and have better houses or apartments.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Sometimes it seems as though everything happens at the same time. The other morning was an example of this occurrence.

Off and on all night, our one dog barked as the other had broken her chain and was running around the buildings. Early in the morning, I discovered her sleeping with the puppy, who was contented for a change, and didn't awaken us - the silence did that. Then, before breakfast was finished, we saw our six pigs had broken out of their pen and discovered the apricot seeds under the trees and were busily crunching away on them. After Philip got the electric fence working, it took us over half an hour to get them chased into their pen. Pigs can be the most stubborn animals - so I've discovered through the years.

And to top off the morning a neighbor, who picked up Cindy to babysit for her, told us a heifer was out on the road again. After repeatedly jumping the fence, we finally brought the whole bunch home and put a younger group into the upper meadow.

Summer is the season for family reunions. It is traditional for folks to gather from several states and catch-up on activities. As scattered families gather, it seems the day turns into a talking and eating marathon. Such an array of food - one can't even sample everything.

But the important thing is keeping the ties strong that bind a family together. As we part, we realize that it is more than just another social event.

xxx

This year we've helped our neighbors raise some ducks. Although neither one of us was entirely satisfied with the conditions under which this happened.

You see, our front porch was open under the floor boards and appeared to be an ideal nesting area. Eventually 31 ducklings emerged with their mothers and waddled to a small pond in the meadow. All the traffic across the cement walk wasn't exactly to our liking and we had several drakes sitting in the yard too.

Now that they have hatched, I've finally put up the poultry fencing which I bought early in the spring and never installed. Such a bunch of frustrated ducks you've never seen.

Historically, the income of nonfarm families hovered well above that of farm residents. But during the 1960's that income gap narrowed, partly because income from off-farm sources increased. Between 1960 and 1970, net farm income grew 44 percent. But at the same time, earnings from off-farm sources shot up 105 percent.

Guernsey field day set

LITTLE BRITAIN - Lancaster County Guernsey breeders will hold their annual field day at the Robert and Joyce Wagner farm, near here, beginning at 10:30 a.m. on August 12.

The event will start with the judging of three classes of Guernseys, with official judging being done by Al McKay, manager of Bayville Farms, Inc., Virginia Beach, Va.

Young boys and girls will have a chance to win a purebred Guernsey calf, donated by the Wagners.

The Wagner farm is located on Scotts Road, east of Little Britain and north of Pa. Route 272.

America's farm and ranch people have set production records unmatched anywhere in the world. Today's U.S. farm worker is producing two-thirds more per man-hour than in 1960, and over six times as much as in 1930.

Ladies Have You Heard?

Peaches Are In Peak Supply

Peaches were singled out for special attention when fresh peach ice cream, homemade, was selected for the dessert at the White House dinner honoring royal visitors from England this bicentennial July. It made its way to the tables elegantly decorated with cream and garnished with fresh raspberries.

All good cooks know a good thing when they taste it. Peaches are not only at the peak of eating perfection, they are also in bountiful supply.

Pennsylvania's peach production is forecast at 11 per cent above the June 1 level due to improved growing conditions.

Use this summer's delicious peaches in this easy parfait. Slice peaches and layer them between sherberts, ice creams, puddings, or gelatin mixes in whatever color and taste combination you wish. To add something special in the way of a topping a melba sauce can add a regal touch to the tall, frosty dessert:

Melba Sauce

1 10-oz. pkg. thawed frozen raspberries
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup currant or raspberry jelly
Drain liquid from raspberries and combine with cornstarch. Mix well. Add jelly. Heat over medium heat, stirring constantly, until bubbly, thick, and clear. Remove from heat. Stir in berries. Chill until ready to serve. Makes about 1½ cups.

Another sweet way to end a meal with fresh peaches would be this unusual upside down peach pie. The recipe sounds a lot more complicated than it is. Just follow these directions for a new kind of pie to add to your standby recipes:

Fresh Peach

Upside Down Pie

Pastry for two-crust 9-inch pie
2 tablespoons soft butter two-thirds cup (4 oz.) toasted sliced almonds or pecans
one-third cup brown sugar
5 cups sliced fresh peaches (about 8 medium size)
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons tapioca
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Line 9-inch pie pan with 12-inch square of foil. Let excess foil overhang edge. Spread with butter, press in nuts and one-third cup brown sugar. Fit bottom crust into pan over nuts and sugar. Mix rest of ingredients. Pour into crust. Cover with top crust. Seal, flute, prick with fork. Brush lightly with milk. Bake at 450 degrees F. for 10 minutes, then at 375 degrees F. for 35 to 40 minutes more. Cool thoroughly. Turn upside down on serving plate. Remove foil.

Consider Soil When Selecting Color of New Carpet
Color and type of soil which will be tracked onto carpets and how carpets will be maintained are two important facts often overlooked when consumers buy new carpets or rugs. Carpet is available in a wide range of colors and shades and color is the main reason a particular carpet is selected. The color may match the draperies, upholstery and other decor. But soil can hide this color.

White, sandy soil, black or brown humus; red clay, oily-greasy industrial soil; and black soot from cities will all have a different effect on the color of a carpet. Soiling conditions will vary within one city. There will be a lot of black carbon soil downtown, sections downwind from industrial areas will have a special type of soil, and lawns covered with grass will not soil carpet as quickly as dusty playgrounds.

Even in the same home, different soiling conditions are found. Food oils and greases drift from the kitchen. But petroleum oils and greases are tracked in from the carport. The entrance areas may be deeply soiled, whereas very little soil will be tracked onto a back bedroom that is reached by walking over the other carpet in the home.

Consider the type and color of the soil which will be carried onto the carpet on the bottoms of shoes. Most people are not interested in matching the color of the carpet with their soil but they should consider breaking up the plainness of the carpet surface. Then the soil would not be as noticeable. A multicolor, high-low pile, and random sheared will all hide soil better than a uniform height solid color.

If someone has their heart set on a white or light gold, they can easily rationalize it is not going to show soil in their home. However, this is not true. But they can set up a cleaning program which will keep the carpet looking acceptable for a long period of time. Even if they buy a darker color or one which will not show soil, some consideration should be given for the removal of stains, removal of loose soil, and cleaning.

Remove stains at once. Surface litter makes the carpet unsightly and should be picked up with a carpet sweeper or some type of vacuum. Vacuum the entire carpet at least once a week to remove the loose, gritty soil. This gritty soil will cut the fibers and shorten the life of the carpet.

Use an upright or a tank type vacuum which has a mechanical or brushing action to loosen the soil and remove it from the carpet. Periodically examine the carpet pile to determine if the loose soil is being removed. The number of strokes over the carpet pile which are needed to remove the loose soil will vary with the height and density of the carpet pile. The closer the carpet turfs are together, the slower the loose soil will work its way to the carpet back. But it will also be more difficult to remove the soil from the back. The efficiency of different vacuums will also vary. The aim is to remove the loose soil and it may require two, three, or as many as seven passes over the same area.

Using net farm income to measure farm family income can be like trying to gauge an iceberg by the size of its tip.

In 1970, for example, income from farming made up less than half the total net income of a farm operator family.

It wasn't always that way. A farm business was once assumed to be the main source of farm family income, and the family's economic welfare was closely tied to the level of net farm income. It was also assumed that a farm operator and his family stood little chance of finding off-farm jobs.

Tractor pulls, which have grown dramatically in popularity over the last several years, will be featured on Monday, Tuesday, and Friday nights. On Monday and Tuesday night it'll be Lebanon Countians competing for the trophies, with garden tractors being featured on the second day. A state-sanctioned Class A tractor pull will be held on Friday night. All pulls will begin at 7 p.m. and a charge of $2 will be made at the gate for all but the garden tractor pulls.

Mechanical horsepower will be replaced by the "Real McCoy" on Wednesday night during a horse pulling contest, beginning at 7 p.m. Admission is $2 per adult.

talent contest, and square dancing.

With livestock shows scheduled throughout the middle of the week, this part of the Fair will come to a climax on Saturday when 4-H's will put their market hogs up for sale and the South Central Championship Holstein Show gets underway.

Crafts

Handcraft a pocketbook worth over 100 dollars

By JOANNE SPAHR
LANCASTER — Vivian Warfel knows the secret to life's happiness. She doesn't have to tell you, you can just see it.

"Part of the joy in life," she says with a smile, "is not what you keep — it's what you share."

And, she follows this philosophy in many ways, especially with her crafts.

Physically slowed down in the past few years by serious health problems, Mrs. Warfel hasn't let her spirit be daunted. Instead, she takes what could be idle time and puts it to good use by creating lovely, delicate handmade items.

As a result, her home is delightfully accented with dried flower arrangements, hooked rugs, wall plaques, pictures, knick knock holders, and other dainty ornaments, all of which she created herself. And, her friends and family have also been blessed on many occasions with gifts she has made for them.

"You know," she mentions, quoting an old adage, "they say that you should always give away only the things you like." And, that is often times what she does.

However, she has one collection of eight handmade pocketbooks that she keeps and uses for her own pleasure.

Made of a type of decoupage called decoupage with repousse, the handbags are wooden, not leather or cloth, and have gorgeous raised designs and scenes on them. For instance, one of her favorites has a nature setting with two-or three-inch lifelike birds standing out in a 3-D pattern. Another has raised flowers, a third has a raised owl, and still another has luscious red strawberries that look real enough to eat popping off the top of the purse. These are only four of her large collection.

Not only is the collection pretty, it is also extremely valuable. Probably one of the characteristics about the pocketbooks which attracted Mrs. Warfel the most besides their beauty is that in Palm Beach where one of her closest friends lives, the women pay up to $150 or more for these purses.

"I could hardly believe it," she says incredulously, "especially with the way our economy is today. And, what's worse, some of those down there are mass produced and really aren't done all that nicely."

It is only natural that she would notice the last characteristic, because, although she claims she's not a perfectionist, she does get "mad" at herself when she "could have done better." Her meticulousness shows in her work.

To look at the purses, it is baffling to figure out how the craft is done. How do the designs stand out, and what are they made of?

Actually, the answer to the puzzle is really very simply. The designs and scenes on the purses are decoupage onto the box and are cut out of gift wrapping paper, cards, wallpaper, and notecards. The raised parts of the designs have been "stuffed" from underneath with a type of dough that hardens when it dries and painted over with acrylics to blend in the stuffing and design, and to make it look real. It's relatively easy to do, but it takes a lot of time and patience.

"It's like any hand craft such as embroidery or knitting," says Mrs. Warfel. "But, you can't count the hours on something that gives you enjoyment."

For those who wish to try the challenge, Mrs. Warfel has set down her process in 15 easy steps which she assures Lancaster Farming every average person could do with success.

Hand craft

EQUIPMENT

The equipment needed to do this handwork are a wooden purse purchased from any craft store, a manicure scissors, a roller, a decoupage tool, acrylic paints, decoupage sealer, varnish, base color, sandpaper, steel wool pads (0000 grade), a sponge brush, a baby bottle, and liquid wax.

The designs and pictures for on the pocketbook can be gotten from almost any type of paper product, and the inside of the purse is finished with velvet, burlap, upholstery cloth, corduroy, or a chamois.

PROCEDURE

Mrs. Warfel's 15 easy steps begin with "pick out your favorite design from a greeting card or wrapping paper." Then, spray both front and back sides of the design with decoupage sealer, letting the paper dry five minutes between each spray. This is to seal in the color so that it won't run as the process of making the bag continues.

The third step is to sand the wooden box and to mark the lid and purse for front and back differentiation. This is to prevent finishing the whole box only to have the lid design on backwards.

Step four is to seal the wood with three light coats of decoupage sealer. The brand of sealer does not matter. However, brands should never be mixed because this can set up an unwanted chemical reaction.

The next step is to paint the box with a base color coat of acrylic paints. This takes a sponge brush, and should be applied three or four times.

After the base coat is applied, the whole thing should be sealed again. To seal it properly, at least two or three coats should be applied.

When the base coat is sealed and dry, a light sanding of the purse with a No. 400 sand paper is the next step.

If an antique look is preferred, spray on decoupage antiquing and wipe off with cheesecloth, then wait for 24 hours.

The ninth step is to again seal the antiquing so that the color doesn't raise.

Now comes the time for the design. To cut it out of the paper, cut with the curved end of the manicure scissors pointing away from you. This is opposite from the way you would normally cut out a design, but it is important, since it makes the cut edges of the design turn downwards. Glue this design on the box with diluted white glue and flatten over it with roller, so all air bubbles are out.

To put on the raised portion of the design, place it in water for a short time to help to stretch it. Then, place the wet paper on a spongy material and gently stretch

The key to making a good raised design on the purses is to work with the figure and dough to make the animal's features stand out. Here, Mrs. Warfel works with a decoupage tool to shape the curve of the skunk's back so that it looks natural. She is working on wax paper and will try to make the animal look as real as possible before she lets it harden, and then paints the white dough with acrylic paint to match the animal picture taken from gift wrap.

it with a decoupage tool. This is important since you will need extra room which the stuffing will take up.

The next step after stretching the paper is to lay a small amount of "dough" or stuffing on the back and place it on wax paper. Mrs. Warfel always uses her own recipe to make the dough or stuffing, and not the commercial product for this purpose. The commercial stuffing springs back and is much more expensive than

Mrs. Warfel's homemade dough.

Mrs. Warfel's Dough

In pan, stir 1 cup corn starch, 2 cups baking soda (1 lb.). Mix in 1 1/4 cups cold water.

Heat. Stir constantly until mixture reaches a moist, mashed potato consistency.

Turn out on plate and cover with a damp cloth. When cool enough to handle, kneed like dough.

Store tightly in refrigerator for future use.

The above dough lasts for several months if stored properly.

As was mentioned, place a small amount of dough on the back of the stretched design, and place it, dough down, on wax paper.

Shape the design from the front of the paper. The object of shaping the design or scene is to give it character, rather than to let it be a "raised blob with a picture stuck on top" as Mrs. Warfel explains it. When shaping, use the dough as filler to give the animal features as you observe them to be in nature. To do this, most of the dough around the edges of the character is taken away, and just the inside is stuffed.

A decoupage tool must be used in this area of the process. You should try to shape character features, such as a raised cheek, an indented leg, etc. This all takes practice, but with a little work and time, the characters can look real.

After the raised object is shaped, let it dry for 24 hours or more and sand the rough edges. Then, to make it all blend in, paint around the edges of the dough with acrylic paints so the white dough doesn't show.

The next step is to glue the figure onto the box with white glue and let it dry for 24 hours.

Once the figure is glued into place, it is time for the decoupage finish. This particular part in the process takes 40 coats — one per hour or more depending on the weather. There is a trick to varnishing, which Mrs. Warfel eagerly passes on. She says to place the brush in a baby bottle with the handle sticking through the cut off end of the nipple and the brush sticking in the varnish. This way, the brush never needs to be cleaned. Also, the varnish should be "flowed on" and never overlapped. To do this, the brush is held nearly parallel to the box to let the varnish glide on. Then, for the next coat, the box is given a quarter turn and varnished again.

When all 40 coats have dried, sand with No. 400 grey or white sand paper which has been dipped in detergent water. Then, use a dry No. 600 sandpaper and smooth the surface until it is milky or dull. Rub it with steel wool to finish it.

Step 14 is to wax with liquid wax dipped in a fine steel wool pad. Let it dry and rub with flannel.

To finish the inside, using white glue, secure the burlap, upholstery cloth, or corduroy. Finish with a braid edging.

For feet, use upholstery nails.

Although this process sounds long and complicated, Mrs. Warfel insists that anyone can do it. She brings up the instance of her 80-year-old mother who did a jewelry box for her using this same technique.

And, she maintains anyone can master this craft because "a willing heart is really the master."

She uses this technique on other objects besides purses, also. For instance, she has refinished plaques, plates, and switchplates in this manner.

In general, decoupage with repousse is a rewarding, fun craft for anyone to do.

Summer fresh vegetables near year earlier

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Summer fresh vegetable supplies may be only slightly smaller than a year earlier, based on average yields of the last three years. In addition, a larger summer onion acreage would probably be offsetting so that total output of fresh vegetables in the summer quarter would be very close to the 1975 figure. With fresh vegetable prices to growers already substantially below a year earlier, the usual summer seasonal decline will seem longer in 1976.

Supplies of onions, peppers, and celery will probably be more generous, but reduced amounts of lettuce, cabbage, and tomatoes may be expected. A larger supply of watermelons will not likely offset tonnage from a reduced cantaloupe and honeydew acreage.

With larger carryovers of most important canned and frozen vegetables, the industry has planned substantial cutbacks in 1976 processed vegetable production. Average yields from 14 percent less acreage would result in materially smaller packs of several leading vegetables. Nonetheless, total supplies are expected to be ample.

The California tomato crop may be large enough to result in continued heavy supplies of tomato products, provided there are no prolonged plant closings because of labor-management disputes. It is estimated that a shutdown through the first week of August may result in a loss of 10 to 15 percent of the crop in California.

Canned pea supplies may again be too large for normal expected use. However, acreage cuts in sweet corn and snap beans promise smaller packs and reduced supplies for 1976-77. For other canned vegetables - beets, sauerkraut, and lima beans - some further cuts would be in line with recent annual use. The total supply of frozen vegetables in 1976-77 promises to be smaller than a year earlier.

The summer potato crop of 22.4 million cwt. is seven percent larger than a year ago. Both acreage and yields are up, and even though the crop is not large by historical standards, it came on the heels of larger than expected spring supplies. This has tended to keep prices under some downward pressure. Summer 1976 prices are not showing typical seasonal highs thus far. July stocks of frozen potato products were 15 percent smaller than on the same date in 1975 when they were unusually large. The first acreage estimates of the important fall crop, which accounts for about 85 percent of annual output, will be released on August 12. Earlier intentions had suggested moderately larger plantings.

There will be a slightly larger sweetpotato acreage for harvest again this year. The gain is largely in North Carolina; Louisiana expects to harvest 1,000 fewer acres. Canning activity may not be especially brisk, but it will likely surpass the 1975 performance.

Dry bean acreage is up 1 percent this year. A larger gain would put substantial pressure on grower prices since there will be another relatively large carryover. Foreign demand in 1975-76 was especially disappointing, and the industry hopes for at least a resumption of average movement out of the country in the 1976-77 season.

In a special article "Home Grown Fruits and Vegetables and Their Uses," Evelyn Kaitz and Jon Weimer report on a home gardening survey. The survey indicated a slight but steady increase in home gardening over the last 3 years. Predominant reasons given by respondents for home gardening were a taste preference for home grown fruits and vegetables, a desire to save money, and an interest in gardening as a hobby. Tomatoes are the most popular vegetable for growing and canning; beans are the most popular for freezing.

Sharon Bare likes to 'give things a whiz'

By JOANNE SPAHR

WITMER - Sharon Bare won first place and a set of wrenches last year for being the top senior in the Central 4-H Tractor Club. And she's proud of it.

"Heck," she scoffs, "I'll just put that set of wrenches in my car and I'll know how to fix it."

And that's that. There's no arguing with this self-assertive little pixy. She may be short and petite, but she packs a lot of power.

Sharon does admit, however, that it is rather unique for a girl to be a part of tractor club, since she was one of only three girls out of 28 members.

"Mostly we got together and worked on different engines, tore down planters, and fixed plows," she said, describing the main focus of this unusual club.

Sharon became a member of the club because her father had been a member before her.

"It was sort of just the thing to do," she explains.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin H. Bare, Witmer, Sharon is a person with many interests.

"I'm the type of person who will give something a whiz, and if it works out, it does, and if it doesn't, it doesn't," she says with a wave of her hand. But when she goes at something, she does it right.

Mostly, she likes to try all areas of agriculture. Besides being a member of the Central Tractor Club for one year, she has been a member of the Red Rose Baby Beef and Lamb Club, the 4-H Boots and Saddles Club, and the Garden Spot Community Club, where she took floriculture.

She has known success in these clubs - winning anything from a set of wrenches to placings at Districts. But, her real love is FFA.

A June graduate of Conestoga Valley High School and Brownstown Vo-Tech, Sharon became acquainted with FFA through her major at Brownstown - floriculture. Both horticulture and floriculture are connected with FFA at the vocational technical schools. And, one thing Sharon made sure to do while she was in FFA was to take her experience and make it work for her.

At present, she has her

Red Rose Chapter and her Star Greenhand degrees and was the secretary of her FFA chapter. She also received the Banker's award during her senior year at Brownstown for the outstanding student in floriculture.

For her ability with flowers, she also won a bronze medal last year at State Days. To win this, she had to make a corsage in 20 minutes, excell in a question and answer test, and correctly identify 40 plants in the greenhouse.

She put her capabilities to the test in two other areas and came out on top. In a corn improvement test, she was top grower, and in her work with livestock she received the livestock award for her FFA steer.

Even though she attained most of her recognition through FFA, she is also a strong advocate of vocational technical schools.

"It's just a great school," she explains. "What you learn there, you can use every day, and if you had to pay for everything you learn, you'd have to pay a lot."

Her Vo-Tech experience has benefited her. She is now a full-time grower at Ruhl's Greenhouse in Witmer. And, through her Vo-Tech and FFA connections, has also successfully completed her work for her pesticide license, which commercial growers need.

Right now she says greenhouse work is slow, so she has another full-time job as an evening bus girl at a nearby restaurant which keeps her occupied. At present, greenhouses are mostly bedding the flowering plants and working with vegetables. In Winter, much of the time will be taken up working with mums, carnations, and other Christmas flowers.

Although Sharon will be (Continued on Page 69)

Sharon is also an animal and outdoors lover. She combines these two loves by caring for her horse, Flicka.

Sharon's favorite work is in the greenhouse. She loves to do the actual planting and taking care of the flowers and vegetables.

HARRISBURG - The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, in response to an outbreak of hog cholera in Massachusetts and the possible exposure of herds in

Hog embargo imposed again

Rhode Island and New Hampshire, imposed a statewide embargo on the movement or sale of all swine from those states into Pennsylvania, effective July 23.

According to Agriculture Secretary Raymond Kerstetter, the embargo will remain in effect until further notice.

Effective July 29, the embargo against all classes of swine from Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire was modified prohibiting the entry of swine into Pennsylvania from premises under individual state quarantine in the three affected states. Swine from herds not under individual state quarantine will not be permitted entry into Pennsylvania if they are breeding or feeding swine.

Market ready slaughter swine from herds not under individual state quarantine will be allowed entry into Pennsylvania provided they move directly from the premises in a sealed vehicle to an approved slaughtering establishment in the Commonwealth, and are accompanied by a federal permit VS-127. The permit lists the number of swine inspected within 48 hours of shipment, the name of the consigner and address, the name of the slaughtering establishment and address, the seal number, and the type of vehicle and license number.

Hog cholera was diagnosed in Worcester County, Mass., on July 17. This outbreak follows previously reported 1976 cases in New Jersey, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire. Secretary Kerstetter urged all Pennsylvania livestock farmers to report cases of sick swine immediately to their veterinarians or the nearest Pennsylvania Agriculture Department regional office so that a prompt diagnosis can be obtained.

"The assistance of the entire industry is essential to prevent an outbreak of hog cholera within the Commonwealth," Kerstetter said. Pennsylvania has had a hog cholera-free rating since July, 1971.

Any person or persons violating any embargo established by the Secretary of Agriculture shall, under Pennsylvania law, be guilty of a summary offense.

Any animals that are brought into the Commonwealth in violation of this Order may be quarantined or destroyed by the Department of Agriculture at the owner's expense.

doing all the flowers for a wedding this Fall, she says she really likes the growing part of greenhouse work the best.

"I'd sooner get myself dirty," she says with a grin. "And, I'd sooner be outside."

She proves these points at home by doing field work such as discing, baling, and working in the barn.

"I don't mind it a bit having to clean the barn, but if I have to clean the house - that's a different story," states the little brownette.

She also has her own vegetable garden with an assortment of plants. Among her many varieties, she grows cabbages, tomatoes, hot peppers, peppers, and brussel sprouts.

"I plant a big garden to sell vegetables to pay for school clothes," she explains.

This year, part of her garden will be for her brother's outfits, also.

She also has a lot of flowers beds and many potted plants.

Although she has given it a try, just like everything else, Sharon just can't enjoy any type of housework or domestic hobbies. For two years, she tried 4-H sewing, but if just wasn't for her. And, for some reason, she loathes housecleaning. To sum it up, domestic work is just one of her whizzes that flopped.

At the present, she seems to have found something in greenhouse work that she really does like, so she won't be moving on from that too quickly. But her outside interests will probably stay as varied and changing as time will allow.

The Civic Center in Springfield, Mass., will be the site of "Northeastern '76," the Bicentennial convention and exposition being co-sponsored by NEPPCO and NEMA August 24-26. The 40,000 square foot convention complex cost $10-million to build.

History accents NEPPCO event

FAIRLESS HILLS — The Northeastern Poultry Convention, one of the oldest annual gatherings of poultrymen in the country, moves into New England for the first time in its 45-year history. With an expected attendance of over 1,000 egg, broiler and turkey producers from eastern U.S. and Canada, it will be staged in the big, modern Springfield Civic Center from August 24 through 26.

To encourage family attendance during this bicentennial year here in the "cradle of Colonial America", sponsors of the annual 14-state convention and exposition have prepared a schedule of special bicentennial events taking place in August within convenient touring distance in New England's famed historic cities. The detailed vacation guide will accompany registration data for the event.

The Northeastern Poultry Convention is being co-sponsored this year by the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council (NEPPCO) headquartered in Fairless Hills, Pa., and the Northeast Egg Marketing Association (NEMA) headquartered in Durham, N.H. Richard I. Ammon, NEPPCO's executive director, is the general chairman and Paul Fisher, NEMA's general manager, is program coordinator.

It avoids conflict with any other major industry convention, it comes during the traditional "summer vacation" period, it allows

THE SENTINEL

Round-the-clock guardian of stored milk temperature

If you depend upon your milk check for a living, protect that income by insuring milk quality.

The least expensive, single-payment insurance obtainable is the Sentinel — the heavy-duty, 10-inch recorder which charts round-the-clock temperature of your milk-cooling or holding tank.

Assure yourself — and your processor — that proper milk temperature is always maintained.

Keep a permanent log of compressor operation and tank cooling or pre-cooling efficiency, from first filling to pickup.

Cleaning temperatures — increasingly questioned by sanitarians — are recorded on the same chart.

At little added cost, the Sentinel is available with provision for actuating an alarm or warning light if milk holding temperature rises above pre-set level.

Remember — if it prevents the loss of only one tank of milk, the Sentinel has paid its own way.

for a New England tour to the nation's most historic sites just when New England has its best weather and its special bicentennial activities and it gives industry men from the northeastern area an "at home" exposition.

"We're as pleased as we can be with the site, the facilities, the cooperation of Springfield officials and the fact that this Convention will be an easy day's drive for poultrymen from any of the 14 northeastern states covered by NEPCO and NEMA," says Ammon.

The big annual exposition will be staged in the 40,000 square foot exhibit area of the new, fully air conditioned $10-million Springfield Civic Center. The adjacent Springfield Marriott in Baystate West and the Holiday Inn will be used to accommodate attendees.

Dozens of special bicentennial events are being staged throughout New England during the weeks just before and after the exposition. Ammon expects scores of industry men to combine a family vacation tour with the three-day show and recommends early registration. Hotel and motel accommodations will be handled by the Springfield Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Teamed with the large commercial exposition will be full-scale educational sessions, complete programs for youth and women and several special social and business activities.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Three members of the Eastern Lebanon County FFA Chapter, and two from the Little Dutchman Chapter, attended the National FFA Bicentennial Conference, here, recently. The three from ELCO were Kirby Horst, Robert Martin, and Patrick Arnold. Little Dutchmen in attendance were Jay Bomgardner and Alan Hostetter.

The FFA Conference program was designed to improve leadership skills, develop an understanding of the national heritage, and prepare FFA members for more effective leadership roles in their chapter and community. The Conference was also a forum for the exchange of FFA Chapter activity ideas among members from across the nation.

Besides the training sessions, the 1976 program included visits to Mt. Vernon Plantation, the National Archives, Smithsonian Institution, Arlington National Cemetery, and several other historic monuments and memorials in and around the Capital.

A highlight of the Conference was a Thursday morning visit to the offices of their congressmen. Later participants attended a Capitol Hill luncheon featuring a question and answer period with congressmen, and Washington leaders in business and industry.

Farm mechanization is reflected in trends toward increasing farm fuel use, which is expected to increase about four percent by 1980.

The TDN available in the feed produced from forty acres of corn put up as silage is far greater than the TDN in yellow corn from that same acreage. The increased TDN, according to U.S.D.A. figures can mean 230,000 additional pounds of milk when it is fed to dairy cows. This represents a potential revenue gain for the dairy farmer.

"The Stonemans" will be appearing at the Shindig at Cripple Creek on Saturday, August 7, at 7 p.m. Patsy, Van, and Jim Stoneman are direct descendants of legendary country and folk music pioneer, Ernest V. "Pop" Stoneman. Pop began making records in 1924 and continued recording until his death on June 14, 1968. The Stonemans are continuing the tradition their father began.

Although their present activities have roots in the past, they know what's happening today as well, and they combine the past with the present. This group of musicians blend various combinations of guitar, bass, banjo, dobro, autoharp, jews harp, snare drum, tambourine, maracas, and their own form of showmanship.

Kutztown Fair entertainment schedule set

KUTZTOWN - It won't be long now before the Kutztown Fair opens its gates for another exciting fun-filled week.

Billed as "The Biggest Little Fair in the State", the Kutztown Fair here will open the 105th annual event on Monday, August 16, and will run through Saturday, August 21.

Adding to this year's excitement is an unprecedented array of top performers who will bring their nationally known talents to the Kutztown stage.

On Monday, August 16, the fair will feature the Blue Ridge Quartet, a group that needs no introduction to fair audiences, or any audience for that matter. They have traveled from coast to coast, from Alaska to Mexico, and are known the world over for their soulful renditions of gospel and spiritual songs.

Tuesday, August 17, the live entertainment on the Kutztown Stage will be Billy Walker.

Billy Walker, the tall Texan, is 6 ft. 3 in. and has a career which has encompassed appearances on just about every major TV show, personal appearances throughout the world, and performances in every major arena in the U.S.

Wednesday, August 18, will be a rare opportunity for the people in the Berks County area to attend an "in person" concert by The Hagers.

These identical twins, Jim and Jon, present an intricate blend of country, rock, folk, and pop music with a flair for comedy.

On Thursday, August 19, Guy and Raina, stars of the Lawrence Welk Show, will make their appearance.

Friday, August 20, Barbara Mandrell will put in her appearance at the Kutztown Fair.

Barbara Mandrell is a country stylist who gives a song and an audience, just the right mixture of zest and warmth. She's been doing just that since the age of five when she learned to read music before she could decipher English.

Now a successful Columbia Records artist, Barbara's releases include "Midnight Oil", "Show Me", "Playing Around with Love", and "I've Been Loving You Too Long" to Stop Now".

Barbara includes a gospel number in each show, whether in the U.S. or on tour in Europe. "I ask people to pay close attention to the words because I am hoping to inspire them in some small way", she said.

On Saturday, August 21, brought back by popular demand, again will appear the popular Blue Ridge Quartet.

The Blue Ridge Quartet has consistently been the pace setter of professional quartets across the nation.

They will appear on Saturday, August 21, as well as opening the Fair on Monday. The Blue Ridge Quartet will also be featured in a special matinee at 3 p.m. on Saturday in addition to the two evening shows.

In addition to the entertainment and America's 1st prize midway... The Jack Royal Shows... the Fair will have something the whole family can enjoy every day of the week.

On Monday, August 16, the Eastern District Holstein Judging will take place at 3 p.m. in the Agricultural Hall. On Tuesday, August 17, starting at 12 noon, there will be sheep judging and at 6 p.m. there will be a dairy fitting and showmanship contest.

Wednesday, August 18, in addition to the tractor driving contest at 6 p.m., will also be included starting at 10 a.m. the judging of Holstein dairy cattle and at 4 p.m. the judging of colored dairy breeds.

Thursday, August 19, swine judging starts at 9 a.m., while the judging of beef cattle, beef fitting, and showmanship will start at 2 p.m. in the Agricultural Hall.

On Friday, August 20, the FFA dairy and livestock judging contest, the FFA tractor driving contest and the 4H dairy judging contest will round out the week's activities.

The youthful exhibitors in the agricultural displays will be competing not only for cash prizes and ribbons, but also for trophies as well.

Granges will also be competing for prizes, judging will be based on quality, variety and display while Junior Grangers will compete for prizes and their exhibits will be judged on theme, display and quality.

Seed symposium set

SHIREMANSTOWN — Beachley - Hardy Seed Co. is conducting their annual Seed Marketing Symposium on Tuesday, August 10 and Wednesday, August 11. The Tuesday meetings, luncheon, and dinner will be held at the Penn Harris Motor Inn, Camp Hill, Pennsylvania.

The meeting on Tuesday will feature speakers and panel members who will speak on alfalfa, corn, and forage seed supplies, seed prices, and seed production problems.

The Wednesday program will feature a visit to demonstration plots at Milton Hershey Farms and Leo Brothers Dairy Farm. Specialists will discuss the various varieties, weed control measures, insect and disease resistance, and other improved management practices - especially as they relate to the new WL Alfalfa varieties.

Last year's milk output remained virtually unchanged at around 115.5 billion pounds, of which dairymen sold just over 112 billion pounds (milk equivalent). Marketings included whole milk and producer-separated cream sold to plants and dealers, as well as milk sold directly to consumers.

New Idea's NEW 9-foot Cut/ditioner

New 9-footer does even more for less money

Now there's a bigger non-stop, plug-free, economical "Hay Thing" from New Idea. Because it's plug-free, this new 9-foot Cut/ditioner will do more work than a mower-conditioner. Beef group plans sale

FAIRFIELD The recently formed Adams County Beef Producers Association, Inc., is now accepting consignments for a graded "Freedom of Choice" calf sale to be held on October 30. Ben Morgan of Penn State will be doing the grading and John Downin of Waynesboro will be the auctioneer. Ernie Smith of the American Polled Hereford Association and Ed Rishel of the Pennsylvania Angus Association will be ringmen.

The Adams County Beef Producers Association, Inc. was launched a year ago to help stimulate the County's beef industry — which ranks fourth in the state. Penn State figures show that there are approximately 40,000 head of beef cattle in Adams County.

Organizers of the new organization were David Simpson of Great Oaks Charolais; Phil Scott, Scotland Farms; Jared Tyson, Adams County Extension agent; and Frank B. Darcey, Jr., cattleman. Darcey is serving as the group's president.

The organization recently completed construction of a new show barn for beef at the South Mountain Fairgrounds and is expecting 50 or more entries in September. On July 6 the group sponsored a Junior Field Day which featured fitting demonstrations and a judging contest.

As the nation's largest industry, agriculture's needs account for about 15 percent of the total energy consumed in this country. In turn, American agriculture creates more than $200 billion worth of food and fiber per year. Much of this ends up in the export market, bringing back almost enough dollars to pay for our petroleum imports.

In a 1970 survey representing 2.4 million farm families, more than 80 percent of the families reported off-farm income. Their net cash earnings totaled $26.2 billion. Net income from farming, excluding Government payments, supplied $11.1 billion. But the remainder came from earnings off the farm.

Roughly 53 percent of the families surveyed reported earnings from wages and salaries, which accounted for nearly three-fifths of all off-farm income.

York women plan for Agri-Women convention

YORK — York County farm women are organizing to join farm women from across the nation as they converge in Kansas City, Mo., November 14-17 for the American Agri-Women National Convention and Exhibits. In the northern tier of the county Mrs. Harold Gross, Manchester R2, is collecting reservations; in the southern tier, Mrs. Paul McPherson, New Park.

"Working Together Within and Among all our Commodities — The End Product is Unity and Success" is the theme with the four P's (Problems, Progress, Promotion, and Potential) forming the guidelines for the commodity sessions to develop a "working together" view.

Commodity sessions for the convention are now being developed to include producers of dairy, livestock, poultry, fruit, vegetables, grain and specialty crops. The first day of the convention will find women discussing the 4 P's in each of the commodity areas, and the end of the convention on Wednesday will include an evaluation and analysis of action to take in promoting items in each area.

The convention is open to all women interested in agriculture. Farm Women's organizations or individuals who are not affiliated with AAW are welcome to attend.

Recently confirmed speakers include Gordon Leith, Executive Vice President of Farmland Industries and a past president of the National Association of Farmer Cooperatives who will address the women on "Threats to Cooperatives."

Director of the National Consumers Congress and Laura Heuser, farm wife and noted speaker from Michigan Women for Survival of Agriculture, will be participants in the Tuesday afternoon session on "Working Together — with other Consumers."

Tom Hendrix, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board will join Harry Kubo, president and founder of the Nisei Farmers League, Calif., in a presentation entitled "Exploring Solutions for Farm Labor Legislation."

Kansas City Board of Trade specialist Roderick Turnbull and Michigan State University Director of Experiment Stations Dr. Sylvan Wittwer will make valuable contributions to a very nitty-gritty "how to and what to do" program for farm women, according to Mrs. Gross.

Registration materials and information are available from Mrs. McPherson; Mrs. Gross is handling flight and room details. This is the third annual convention trip the women have planned which in the past have included nearly 40 local farm women in transit.

The Stuff Just Won't Go Away

The European Community (EC) has launched an all-out effort to pare down its burdensome supplies of nonfat dry milk, but surpluses may nonetheless hit a new high of around 1.4 million metric tons by the end of this year. That's enough to provide some 3 billion people with a gallon of skim milk apiece. It could also fill the EC's usual exports of nonfat dry milk for the next 5 years... or even longer since markets are shrinking in the face of a dairy surplus that now grips all of Western Europe, Oceania, and North America, including Mexico.

WE DO. The Farm Credit System. We're agriculture's own credit source. Owned by and operated for the benefit of farmers, ranchers, and growers.

We help farmers buy and improve acres that produce millions of bushels of grain, cases of eggs, crates of oranges, gallons of milk, board feet of lumber, tons of hay, countless head of livestock, bales of cotton, lugs of peaches. And all other kinds of products of American Agriculture.

There's more. We provide money for feed, seed, fertilizer, feeder calves, baby chicks, machinery, and all the other supplies to operate a modern farm.

It's our job to gather the most important crop of all - capital. Money for all the things it takes to keep agriculture at full capacity, able to feed and help clothe the other 95 percent of our population... plus untold millions in other lands.

In Ohio, the Cooperative Extension Service has come up with a way to awaken new market understanding among farmers - a college-level course in grain marketing. And farmers needn't even visit campus to participate.

A little over 3 billion pounds of milk produced last year never left the dairy farm. Producers and their families consumed just over half of it in milk, butter, and cream, and fed the balance to their calves.

Pa.'s corn crop is excellent

HARRISBURG — The cool evenings and overcast days during the week ending August 2 slowed crop growth in the Commonwealth, while scattered showers limited farmers to four suitable days for fieldwork, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Although the weather slowed growth somewhat, the state's corn crop is in excellent condition. Average height statewide is at 69 inches, about the same as last year. Northern counties report height at 62 inches, central counties at 67 inches and southern counties are at 83 inches. Sweet corn is reported in excellent condition with harvest activity heavy.

Wheat harvest is now rated 71 per cent done with 21 per cent ripe, compared to 60 per cent harvested and 25 per cent ripe last year at this time. Poor to average yields are being reported.

Oats are now rated 37 per cent harvested statewide, much ahead of last year's 27 per cent at the same time. Another 43 per cent is ripe with 16 per cent turning yellow. Harvest is 15 per cent completed in northern areas, 37 per cent in central areas and 68 per cent in southern areas. Yields are rated average to above average with localized areas reporting lodging problems.

The first cutting of alfalfa is now 99 per cent done with the second cutting 62 per cent completed. Quality is rated mostly fair to good with average yields. Clover timothy is now 94 per cent harvested.

Pastures continue to supply an adequate amount of feed.

Tomatoes, snapbeans, green peas and cabbage are being picked for fresh markets and all are reported in good condition. Early apples and peaches are presently being picked.

In the United States, as of July 27, the corn crop remained in generally good condition, with some major states reporting potential yield reductions due to moisture shortages. The dry spell in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Minnesota stressed the corn crop and caused leaves to curl and fields to fire. Iowa, with less than half the crop in good condition, indicated that 92 per cent is silked, compared to 64 per cent a year ago and a 62 per cent average for this time of the year.

Fluctuating grain markets have ruined many a calm night's sleep for farmers who dream of making a profit on their crops.

Farm threats allegedly political

CHICAGO, Ill. — The threat of a corporate farm takeover of American agriculture is an election year "bogeyman," according to the head of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Allan Grant, president of the 2,500,000 member-family American Farm Bureau Federation, says "despite what you may hear in this election year about the death of the 'family' farm, patterns of farm ownership have remained virtually unchanged for the past 50 years or more.

"About three per cent of all farms were 'corporation' farms 50 years ago, and that figure remains almost identical now," Grant told those attending the National Society of Accountants for Cooperatives, holding their 41st annual meeting here. He said that corporation farms of various kinds now make up about seven per cent of U.S. farmland.

The farm leader said that politicians and others "carefully perpetuate" fears that agri-business conglomerates and well-heeled corporations are muscling farm and ranch families off the land. He called such fears "a form of myth carefully contrived and perpetuated by politicians and others as part of an election year bag of tricks."

Political fascination with the alleged problem of "preserving" the family farm, he said, stems from an intense desire on the part of some political candidates to become identified in the public mind with the solid virtues of American farm life, and to be seen as champions and protectors of individual voters.

"Defending the family farm from the supposed inroads of corporate bigness — and consumers from the implied higher prices supposedly imposed by farming cartels — has almost irresistible appeal to the true politician," Grant said. He added, "Often another purpose of the exercise is to convince people that government 'protection' is good for agriculture.

"In reality, corporations usually do very poorly in agriculture. Most truly corporate farms have low productive efficiency compared to family operations and their rate of return on monies invested is unattractive to shareholders," Grant said.

There are however, many incorporated family farming operations Grant noted, in listing a number of legal and organizational reasons why farm and ranch families take this action. "It eases the transfer of farm property from one generation to the next, and helps assure that the farm stays in the family. It makes sense to sell or transfer the whole farm on a share-by-share basis rather than go through a cow-by-cow and acre-by-acre sell-off," Grant said.

"In some states and under some conditions, there may be a modest tax advantage to having the family farm incorporated, but not always. In some cases it may actually cost the family money, but is worthwhile in a legal sense in helping assure that the farm remains intact.

"Nearly two-thirds of all farming corporations are family-owned and controlled; over 80 per cent of all land owned by corporations is held by family corporations with 10 shareholders or less," Grant told the group.

Also diluting the figures, Grant said, are such corporate farm structures as agricultural experimental stations, prison farms, "boystowns" and similar operations where farming is done more for social reasons than for the actual production and sale of crops.

Grant said that Farm Bureau has been studying the effects of "tax-loss" farming (entry of non-agricultural firms or professional people into farming to obtain tax write-offs against non-farm income), and that loopholes in the law creating tax advantages to encourage this should be closed.

Poultry show drawing interest

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A speaking program loaded with updated poultry and egg merchandising and promotional ideas is boosting early registration figures for the Northeastern Poultry Exposition, slated for this historic city August 24 through 26.

Invitations to state poultry associations to form bus trips to the big annual 14-state gathering, plus special interest on the part of American Farm Bureau Federation regional leaders and members are helping to swell advance registration, according to Richard I. Ammon, show general manager. AFBF president Allan Grant will be the keynote at the convention, sponsored jointly by the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council (NEPPCO) and the Northeast Egg Marketing Association (NEMA).

Other early registration incentives appear to be a program for women, including a tour of historic restored Sturbridge Village, and interest in a revitalized commercial exposition, with new exhibitors drawn to a first-time-ever New England convention housed in the magnificent new $10 million, controlled-environment Civic Center here.

"While the speaking program runs the gamut from grassroots management tips to the use of new economic tools, a heavily sales-oriented seminar schedule is drawing a great deal of interest, Ammon says.

The experiences of a new egg marketing cooperative in Raleigh, N.C. called Eggmar, will be detailed by its executive director, Maurice J. Pickler, in a review of "From Imitation to Innovation in Egg Marketing."

A popular female promoter, Linda Fitzhugh, executive secretary of the North Carolina Egg Marketing Association, will unveil local, state and regional merchandising ideas which are working. Her session is called "Why You Need Someone Like Me".

The goals and programs of the new Egg Board will be outlined by Louis B. Raffel, its executive vice president. And some controversial observations on "How to Egg-On the Retailer" will be made by one of the industry's most knowledgeable veteran marketers, Herbert B. Gabriel, former head of the egg department at the A&P Stores.

Show registration and full details are available at the NEPPCO office, 322 Oxford Valley Rd., Fairless Hills, PA 19030, or by calling 215-547-0190.

Grange opposes ag bargaining board

HARRISBURG - The Pennsylvania State Grange last week characterized proposed legislation to create an Agricultural Bargaining Board as "unrealistic and too restrictive."

Testifying at a hearing on House Bill 211, Charles E. Wismer, Jr., chairman of the Grange's legislative committee said the legislation fails to establish qualifications for appointees to the proposed board. He also stated that a board of three members, as proposed in the legislation, would not be representative of those engaged in producing the many different commodities included in Pennsylvania's agriculture.

He also told members of the House Agriculture Committee that in granting the board authority to adopt, amend and revise rules and regulations, "we would be handing over to this board virtual control of bargaining processes involving agricultural products."

Wismer also declared that the broad scope of the legislation would be too restrictive. Under terms of the legislation, he said, producers and handlers could discuss and limit production in such a way that it would be "virtually impossible for a new producer to start in business, or a farmer to change his operation."

A section of the proposed legislation describing bargaining methods and processes, Wismer said, "is so unrealistic it is difficult to believe that such a program could truly benefit producers or handlers."

In expressing the Grange's opposition to the proposed legislation, Wismer voiced the opinion that the bill would weaken the position of Pennsylvania agriculture. Commenting on the proposed legislation following the hearing, J. Luther Snyder, master of the State Grange, warned that bargaining over the sale of farm produce "could be dragged out for weeks or months if provisions of this bill (HB 211) were followed."

He noted that the bill stipulates three steps to be taken if "after a reasonable period of negotiations in good faith" a producer's association and handler are unable to agree on sale terms.

In that event, the proposed bargaining board would "offer conciliation and mediation services for 15 days."

If that failed to produce an agreement, the dispute would be submitted to a joint settlement committee.

Then, any decision of the settlement committee would be "subject to judicial review in the Commonwealth Court."

Snyder pointed out that negotiations between producer and handler, plus 15 days of mediation service by a board, plus time spent by a settlement committee, and finally a court review "could easily result in the loss of the crop in question."

PennAg director critical of HB211

HARRISBURG — A bill currently before the Pennsylvania House of Representatives would damage the system for marketing farm products within the state, Morris E. Brown told a hearing convened here earlier this month by the House Agriculture Committee to examine the impact of H.B. 211.

Brown is general sales manager of feed and flour for F. M. Brown's Sons, Inc., Birdsboro, and is also involved in the operation of a 750-acre, 90-head dairy farm. He currently serves on the board of directors for PennAg Industries Association, a trade organization of Pennsylvania agribusiness firms.

H. B. 211 would provide the legislative framework for farm bargaining organizations which could compel buyers to buy from producer groups. Further, in Brown's views, the bill would require all producers of some farm commodities to sell their production through this kind of organization.

"While we are generally sympathetic to the desires of the committee to develop plans for producers to get a higher percentage of the food dollar," he said, "we do not feel the approach in H. B. 211 is the solution. We are not opposed to producers joining together to market their products and we think processors should negotiate with such groups. But the fact is farmers can do that now. They do not need legislation to accomplish it."

Marketing groups succeed or fail for different reasons, Brown pointed out. Some may fail because buyers just aren't interested in the crop. Others might go under because not enough of the crop is produced in any given area to warrant the establishment of a market. Or there may be a lack of competing markets. Poor management could be another reason.

Brown warned that the restrictions placed on marketing could hurt both producers and buyers. "While reference is made about 'freedom to join', the actual intent is to club every producer of a commodity into marketing only through the accredited association."

"When the association represents 51-percent of the producers, regardless of the volume, the terms become binding on all producers, as we read it. If I am a producer of some size I may have other arrangements or desire other terms than were made for me. As a practical matter if I am a small producer I must join this association if I wish to raise the product — or I can't market it."

As an alternative to H.B. 211, Brown called for the development of more markets for farm commodities, and concluded by saying that more should be done to educate farmers in the intricacies of marketing their products.

"We've placed a lot of emphasis on teaching farmers how to grow crops," he said. "And while the producer may spend many winter hours planning next summer's crop program, we feel he probably does not pay enough attention to his market strategy."

"Our educational system has worked miracles in increasing farm production through new technology and efficiency brought about by research and education. Farmers certainly haven't been forced to grow more through legislation."

"The American farmer is an independent - thinking person. He's intelligent. He's been convinced that there are better ways of producing crops and he's responded. We think he'd respond, too, without being forced, to the same kind of approach in marketing those farm products."

Rep. Brandt explains HB 211

HARRISBURG - Rep. Kenneth R. Brandt, R-Lancaster, said last week the House Agriculture Committee is considering legislation to establish a State Bargaining Board to determine the standards of farming cooperatives and their members.

Brandt, a member of the Agriculture Committee and sponsor of the bill (HB 211), said the measure is designed to help small family farmers who presently must compete against the giant food growers.

"Years ago there were many more markets available to the Pennsylvania farmer for the sale of his products," Brandt said. "These included produce terminals, auctions, and exchanges."

"Today's farmers must compete against the big food producers who often times sell produce at lower prices than the average farmers."

"This bill would determine the provisions under which farmers can band together in the form of a bargaining cooperatives for the purpose of the sale and marketing of farm products."

Brandt said the bill would establish a Pennsylvania Agriculture Bargaining Board which will accredit the State's cooperatives in order to protect each member.

The Board would consist of a three member panel appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the State Senate to act as overseers of the cooperatives.

"Farmers are presently at the mercy of people outside of agriculture," Brandt said. "But this bill would give the farmer a more active decision-making role in his future."

He added that the bill in its present form has many provisions and changes to be hammered out but "it is basically a very good piece of legislation."

"The problem is that farmers must buy retail and sell their products whole sale. We must provide fair prices for farm good in the State."

He urged farmers in the Lancaster County area to contact his office for further explanation or possible input.

Weaver's Quality Eggs, Inc., a subsidiary of Victor Weaver's, New Holland, will be receiving a home of its own late this year in the Greenfield Industrial Park East. The new 5,000 square-foot facility is being built on a seven acre tract along William Penn Way by the High Realty Company. Designs and plans were drawn up by Harold A. Althouse and Associates of Ephrata. Weaver's will lease the brick and steel structure on a long term basis. With 55 employees expected to be working in the plant, the facility will focus on egg production, sales, and transportation. The Weaver Company processes between 40 and 50 thousand dozen eggs per day and distributes them to retail markets all along the upper East Coast. In addition, they handle eggs in bulk packaged form for distribution to institutions and large volume food service establishments.

Rural Art of these four barn murals is part of the Dairyland Graphics program sponsored by the Wisconsin Arts Board. Youth groups in six Wisconsin communities, who worked with local artists to design the murals, applied more than 100 gallons of paints by PPG Industries to complete the barn-size artworks.

Wisconsin farmers turn barns into works of art

WISCONSIN - If a friend tells you he has seen paintings as big as barns in Wisconsin, don't assume he's exaggerating. In fact, the paintings are on barns.

In a unique project designed to help persons in rural Wisconsin express their artistic feelings, the Wisconsin Arts Board last year initiated a mural-painting program that surfaced on six barns in as many communities. The program, called Dairyland Graphics, will be repeated this year as six additional barn sides are slated to be painted.

Initial funding for a program coordinator and local professional artists came from the National Endowment for the Arts, according to Jerrold B. Rouby, executive director of the Wisconsin Arts Board.

"We consider the first-year program a tremendous success," Rouby said. "We have had calls from persons in communities across the state asking that murals be painted on barns in their areas this year."

Dairyland Graphics, according to Rouby, was the first statewide mural program offered to rural areas in any state.

"It gave local citizens an opportunity to express themselves artistically in a form easily seen by passersby," he said. "In each of the six communities, a sense of civic pride in the painted barn developed among the residents."

Once the board selected the six communities, the program coordinator sought local help to find suitable barn walls, gain permission from barn owners, find local artists and student volunteers to design and paint the murals, and arrange for local publicity and dedication ceremonies.

Youth organizations such as the Girl Scouts and 4-H groups provided many enthusiastic volunteers. After working with artists to design each mural on paper, volunteers aided in reducing murals to scale on charts. Each chart was cut into sections and each numbered section was stapled to a corresponding section of a barn, where young painters could study it and transfer it to barn wood with crayon. Volunteers then filled in the colors with Pittsburgh Paints.

Each barn was dedicated in community ceremonies, and the program's results have pleased residents and tourists alike.

Food demands continue to grow by about 2 percent per year.

The more productive the agriculture of a nation, the fewer people it needs to grow its food. This releases a greater proportion of the population to do other things. They can spend their energies manufacturing production items. They can be employed in building up the economic structure of the country. More people can go into education, the arts, and professions. More of the population can be employed in providing health and governmental services.

New book depicts rural America

WASHINGTON — The Face of Rural America, a photo book of American agriculture in the Bicentennial year, was published last month by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

This panorama of modern farming, in large picture book format with 288 pages, is the 1976 Yearbook of Agriculture. It contains 335 photographs, mostly black and white but including some in color. The photos center on farming, farm families, and country living as it is in the Bicentennial year.

More than 50 photographers located across the nation were asked to use their cameras during 1975 and early 1976 to photograph typical rural America at work and at play.

"If someone had been able to put together a good book of photographs in 1776 showing Colonial life as it really was, that book would be invaluable today. It would bring early America to life for us in a way words alone cannot do," says Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz in the introduction to the Yearbook.

"As we thought about this, we decided that we wouldn't miss the opportunity to photograph America's farm life for the 1976 Bicentennial.

"This book captures, photographically, American rural life as it is today. Not only will the book become more valuable with each passing year, but its first purpose is to help you understand better right now what modern farming is really like," says Secretary Butz.

"Modern agriculture is changing so fast that it is hard to keep up. Those who 'used to live on a farm' may have fond memories of those experiences, but if they are away from the farm for even a while, they quickly fall behind."

"Farms are getting larger, as they should," the Secretary continues, pointing out that they are still family farms because farmers with tractors, self-propelled harvesters, and automated equipment can do a great deal more than a farmer could with horses, a scoop shovel, and hand harvesting.

"Over the last 20 years, the output per hour on the farm has increased more than three times as fast as output per man hour in non-farm activities," Secretary Butz notes. "Whereas one farm worker produced enough to feed himself and 19 others 20 years ago, he can now feed 56 besides himself."

"We have become so efficient that we are way and above the world's largest exporter of farm products," the Secretary says.

"The photographs in the book have captured some of the flavor of this pulsating, efficient, productive agriculture — and the qualities of the farm people," whom he describes as "strong, independent, resourceful people with a deep faith and optimism, and a robust ability to enjoy life along with the work."

Two recent Yearbooks of Agriculture — "Contours of Change", 1970, and "A Good Life for More People", 1971 — dealt with problems on the land such as rural areas which progress has bypassed, pockets of rural poverty, substandard rural housing, and deficient community services.

A copy of "The Face of Rural America", the 1976 Yearbook of Agriculture, may be obtained for $7.30 at government bookstores or by mailing a check or money order payable to the Superintendent of Documents and addressed to Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. In addition, each member of Congress has a limited number of copies for free distribution to constituents.

The Agriculture Department produced the book but has no copies for public distribution or sale.

Racing featured at Allentown

ALLENTOWN — At a time in life when less adventurous men are either retiring to a life of ease or preparing for it, three veteran race-car drivers are still standouts in their chosen profession.

The dauntless trio will be in the large field of top drivers in the East and Midwest expected to compete in the Super Midget Racing Club program at the Allentown Fair on Saturday, August 14. It will be the first time the fair has sponsored auto races since 1968, when the sport was discontinued after being a closing-day feature from 1919.

Ed "Dutch" Schaefer, who just turned 61 last June 23 and has been driving racing cars since 1930; Carl Miller, who was in his twenties when he raced in his first midget at Dorney Park just before the outbreak of World War II; and Lou Fray, winner of the 1975 SMRC championship, who drove his first midget in 1946 will be competing with a lot of other veterans in addition to many of the up-and-coming young and aggressive racers who have been steadily climbing in the ratings.

The Allentown Fair has an open format and possibly will attract drivers such as Ronnie Dunstan, mostly a modified stock car driver, who won the SMRC feature at Bloomsburg last year, and Glenn Fitzcharles, also a modified driver, winner at Flemington.

SILAGE MAKE YOU MONEY?

Since silage is superior to dry feeds in TDN per acre, the farmer can expect higher dollar yields from his silage. The increased TDN in silage means the farmer can feed more cattle with the same crop. He can produce more beef, more milk, and of course more dollars. But there are some dangers. Not all silage is the same. The farmer who wants to make sure that he makes more money with silage must make excellent silage. To insure consistent silage, he NEEDS our fermentation formulas.

Crownvetch - ideal for conservation

HARRISBURG — Anyone traveling through Pennsylvania this time of year cannot help noticing the masses of dark green plants covered with small pink and lavender flowers that grow along many of the state's highways.

And although this plant, known as Penngift Crownvetch and widely used by PennDOT landscapers is quite attractive, it is its unseen virtues that have made it a landscaping and environmental miracle.

Crownvetch has proved to be the near perfect natural control for erosion, weeds, poor soil and even litter. It has even been named the "roadside conservation plant."

A cousin to the pea and clover, this plant not only thrives in the poorest soil but actually enriches it as it grows. Established crownvetch, therefore, requires no fertilizing.

Because of its amazing ability to smother weeds, it eliminates the need for chemical herbicides. And the plant practically "eats" litter, keeping waste paper and other trash out of sight until it decomposes naturally.

Crownvetch is the ideal erosion control plant because it will grow on the steepest slopes and its dense foliage and intricate roots break up the rain and hold back soil.

Another plus is that it is easy to control and never needs cutting, thereby saving valuable tax dollars. In fact, once established, crownvetch completely takes care of itself.

Crownvetch is a dense dark green mass of foliage about two feet high during its growing season which lasts from May to November. In midsummer, the plants are literally covered with small fragrant pink, white and lavender flowers. From December to March the plant is dormant and takes on the color of the surrounding landscape.

This amazing plant, known to scientists as Cornilia varia, is a native of Europe. But it wasn't until years after it found its way to Pennsylvania as an adulterant in alfalfa seed that its potential became known.

Dr. Fred Grau, a professor at Penn State University, was traveling near Virginville, Berks County, in June of 1935 when he noticed a purple flowered plant clinging to a shale hillside where nothing else would grow.

At first, no one knew what the plant was, not even the scientist at Penn State. Robert Gift, on whose farm it grew, only knew it as "that weed." Later, botanical clues identified it as a member of the legume family which includes peas and clover.

Dr. Grau took seeds and cuttings and started growing Crownvetch on two small farms near State College. The plant was named Penngift for the state and farm on which it was found. All crownvetch in Pennsylvania is descended from that which Dr. Grau first found.

By 1948 crownvetch cultivation and production was sufficiently advanced that a trial planting was made on a highway cut near Port Matilda, Centre County. The experiment was so successful that others were made and by 1955, crownvetch became a standard plant for erosion control along Pennsylvania highways, replacing honeysuckle and other hard to control vines.

Currently there are over 35,000 acres of crownvetch planted along Pennsylvania highways and the plant is also coming into wide use in other states. It has also been used to cover earthen dams, levees and strip mines. It can be used for forage, and is nutritious for cattle. And some Crownvetch enthusiasts say the blossoms make a good dessert wine.

Royster to build facility

TAMPA, Fla. - The Royster Company announced that the company will build a multi-million dollar storage tank and truck-rail loading facility in Tampa, Fla. Royster is the nation's largest independent fertilizer manufacturer.

Construction will begin in the fall on the tank which will hold anhydrous ammonia to be shipped to the company's phosphate plant in nearby Mulberry, Fla. The ammonia will be shipped into Tampa in liquid form from several overseas sources including Venezuela, Trinidad, and New Orleans and will be used in producing fertilizer.

The Royster facility will be constructed on 17 acres of the Hookers Point section of the Port of Tampa, and is scheduled to be completed by late 1977. Cattlemen still hurting; balancing effect seen

DENVER, Colo. - The nation's cattle industry has been showing greater than previously expected progress in getting cattle numbers, including the basic cow herd, back into better balance with beef demand, the American National Cattlemen's Association pointed out last week.

ANCA cited recent U. S. Department of Agriculture data on cow slaughter and the U. S. cattle inventory which suggest that the cow herd and total cattle numbers as of Jan. 1, 1977, will be less than levels projected earlier by most analysts.

"It is apparent that the reduction phase of the cattle cycle is continuing quite rapidly," said Wray Finney, ANCA president. "The relatively large slaughter of cows and other cattle this year has resulted in record large beef supplies, compounding the already extremely difficult price problems of cattle producers and feeders. This also means that the industry may 'get well' sooner than many persons expected."

"Meanwhile, although we can see the light at the end of the tunnel more clearly, supplies are such that we still face some periods when both fed cattle and feeder cattle prices are unfavorable in relation to today's higher average production costs."

Economists with Cattle-Fax, ANCA's market analysis arm, said that the most favorable indicator in the latest government figures was the report that the cow herd as of July 1, 1976, was down seven percent from a year earlier, and heifers for beef cow replacement were down 12 percent. The most bearish price indicator was an increase of eight to 10 percent in numbers of feeder cattle (both inside and outside of feedlots) over 500 lbs.

According to Cattle-Fax, highlights of USDA's July 1 inventory report included:

-The total cattle inventory, at 133.5 million head, was down five percent from a year earlier - the lowest July 1 total since 1973.

-Cow slaughter during the first half of the year totaled an estimated 5.1 million head - up 10 percent from 1975, and nine percent more than previously projected. (The projections are monthly and annual cow slaughter rates previously estimated by Cattle-Fax as being needed to eventually balance cow herd size with beef demand and today's production cost levels.) June cow slaughter was substantially larger than expected.

The total July 1 cow herd, at 53.8 million head, was down seven percent from a year ago and was the smallest since 1972. Beef cow numbers, at 42.8 million, were off nine percent. As of Jan. 1, 1977, the total cow herd may be 52 to 53 million, or four to five percent less than a year earlier.

-Heifers for beef cow replacement, at 6.5 million, were at the lowest level since mid-year inventory records have been kept.

-The only inventory increases were in feeder heifers over 500 lbs. (8.4 million, or 10 percent more than a year ago) and in steers over 500 lbs. (18.7 million, up eight percent). In part, this reflects the fact that more cattlemen have gone to stocker or cow-calf operations, instead of strictly cow-calf operations. The figures also reflect sharp increases in numbers of cattle on feed this year. When one removes the cattle-on-feed factor, numbers of feeder cattle over 500 lbs. which are outside feedlots are up four percent from 1975.

-Numbers of calves under 500 pounds were 39.3 million, down eight percent from a year earlier. This reflects continued heavy calf slaughter and the reduced calf crop - the smallest crop since 1971. Calves born in 1976 are now estimated at 46.9 million head, down seven percent from 1975. The sharp calf crop reduction results from poor calving rates in some areas and the likely inclusion of some bred cows in the heavy first-half cow kill.

The relatively large Jan.-June cow kill, Cattle-Fax said, stems from drought situations in some areas as well as adverse industry economics. Slaughter rates during the remainder of the year will be affected by weather, grass conditions, and grain prices as well as seasonal trends and other economic developments.

DHIA men honored

UNIVERSITY PARK - Jay Mylin and David Harnish, Lancaster County DHIA supervisors, recently received the Distinguished Service Award for outstanding service to the DHIA program. The presentations were made at the annual DHIA Supervisors' Conference, held here last month. The award is presented by the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

In addition, three other Lancaster County supervisors were singled out for exemplary performances, and a new board of officers was chosen.

Recognized along with Mylin and Harnish for DHIA work, were Wilbur Houser, 20 years of service; Harold Lindcamp, 25 years of service; and Harold Breneman, 10 years of service. Lindcamp received a gold wrist watch in appreciation of the many years he has devoted to the organization.

by the U S Fish and Wildlife Service in Washington following annual surveys of breeding populations. States then select dates for seasons within the federal framework Pennsylvania waterfowl seasons will not be established until late August or early September. The Game Commission cannot set waterfowl seasons until after the federal government draws up its framework, which is not completed prior to late August at the earliest.

This year the Pennsylvania season for doves will open at 12 noon on Wednesday September 1, and will close at sunset on Tuesday, November 9.

Daily shooting hours for doves will be from 12 noon until sunset. The daily limit will be 12, with a possession limit of 24 after the first day of the season.

This year's season on sora and Virginia rails and gallinules will coincide with the dove season, opening on September 1 and closing on November 9. There is no open season on king and clapper rails in Pennsylvania.

The daily bag and possession limit is 25 on sora and Virginia rails, singly or in the aggregate of the two species. The daily limit on gallinules is 15, with not more than 30 in possession after the first day of the season.

In 1976 the snipe season will open on Saturday, October 16, and continue through Saturday, December 18. The daily bag limit on Wilson's or jacksnipe is eight, with a possession limit of 16.

The season for woodcock also opens on Saturday, October 16, and will continue through Saturday, December 18. This year's daily bag limit on woodcock remains at five, with a possession limit of 10 after the first day.

Shooting hours for rails, gallinules, snipe and woodcock are from a half hour before sunrise until sunset except on the opening day of the general small game season, Saturday, October 30, when there will be no hunting for any wild birds or wild animals in the state before 9 a.m.

A federal migratory bird hunting stamp (duck stamp) is not required to hunt doves, rails, gallinules, snipe or woodcock.

Urbanites subjected to seemingly endless crescendo of jack hammers, pneumatic drills, subways, sirens, airplanes and automobile traffic face a noise pollution health threat as serious and far reaching as air and water pollution, officials of the Beltone Crusade for Hearing Conservation report.

Although public indignation with unwarranted noise dates back to the Roman Empire when citizens complained about noisy chariot riders, it was not until 1972 that federal regulations were passed seeking to limit the rising clamor that characterizes many urban areas.

Women's program added to U of Maryland field day

QUEENSTOWN, Md. — A forenoon women's program will be a new feature at next month's ninth annual University of Maryland crops and soils research field day on the Eastern Shore. The event is set for Tuesday, Aug. 17, at the Wye Institute in southern Queen Annes county.

As in past years, persons attending the field day will have an opportunity to see research plots involving agronomic and horticultural crops and woodland management.

They will have a chance to hear University of Maryland and U.S. Department of Agriculture research workers explain individual projects, and they can visit with their friends while viewing machinery displays and educational exhibits.

There will also be opportunity for afternoon follow-up visits to selected research plots, after the usual two-hour morning wagon-train tour to get an over-all look at the research work in progress.

Registration for field day activities will begin at 8:30 a.m. near the Wye Institute headquarters office, with the wagon-train tours running every 15 minutes from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Lunch and a short afternoon program are also on tap. This will be followed by a possible field demonstration of chisel plows from several manufacturers and a chance to revisit some of the research plots.

One of the new research projects on this year's tour is designed to measure the influence of different nitrogen sources on notillage corn. Begun just this year, the project's aim is to compare results on corn growth from ammonium nitrate, two types of urea and a 30 percent liquid nitrogen solution.

Some of the research projects which are familiar to previous field day participants include limnanthes, still being tested for suitability as an oilseed crop in Maryland; waxy and high oil corn variety trials, and various fertility and weed control treatments in continuous corn planted under both no-tillage and conventional cultural practices.

Another research project which has been around for awhile - although relatively unknown to the general public - is kenaf, a tall-growing fiber plant of the Hibiscus family. It is grown commercially in Central America, Africa, and Southeast Asia. The fiber has long been used for cordage and canvas manufacture.

Not included on the tour, but available for viewing by interested persons, will be a wide array of research plots pertaining to turfgrass varieties and mixtures, herbicides and growth regulators for woody ornamental plants, and forestry demonstration plots.

Also, the ongoing horticulture breeding work for new high quality strawberry cultivars with resistance to major disease problems; weed control studies with grapes, and sweet corn varieties for processing. And there are numerous other projects in the realms of soil, water and crop research.

The Wye Institute is located 7 miles southeast of Queenstown on Maryland's Eastern Shore, or 4½ miles south of U.S. highway 50, on the Carmichael-Wye Neck road. Sponsoring agencies for the field day are the Wye Institute at Cheston-on-Wye and the University of Maryland's agriculture experiment station, headquartered at College Park.

Lost farmland studied

The specter of urbanization rapidly gobbling up our cropland is not the threat it may seem.

Looking at airphotos of 53 counties that experienced 20 percent of the U.S. population increase between 1960 and 1970, USDA's Economic Research Service found that urban uses accounted for 16 percent of the total land area, up from 13 percent in 1960.

In all counties, each person added to the population resulted in one-sixth of an acre of rural land shifting into urban use. But only a third of this rural land had been in crops.

Also, researchers noted that advancing urbanization sometimes meant more intense use of land already given to urban areas.

In 1970, land in agricultural uses - cropland, pasture and range, and farmsteads - make up 39 percent of the study area, versus 42 percent 9 years earlier.

Cropland's share of the 53 counties dropped from 33 to 33 percent of the total land area. But losses weren't all to urbanization. In fact, only about a half of the 500,000 acres taken out of cropland went to urban uses and more new cropland was brought into production than was lost to urban development.

Open idle land - unforested terrain showing no sign of other use - took the biggest share of land formerly in crops. Similarly, most new cropland developed during the 1960's had been open idle land.

This simultaneous diversion of cropland into idle land and idle land into crops indicates that producers continually reevaluate land capability in light of changing technologies. For example, mechanization has favored development of large tracts of level or gently sloping land.

Cropland, which slipped three percentage points during 1960-70, declined the most of all nonurban land uses. The others - open idle land, pasture and range, and forest - each shrank by less than 1 percentage point.

Palm Oil Prospects

For the marketing year ending this September 30, the U.S. is expected to import a record 1 billion pounds of palm oil - roughly 8 percent of all fats and oils now used in this country. However, claim USDA economists, monthly import levels have already peaked and we can expect shipments to moderate over the next 4 marketing years. Ample supplies of domestic fats and oils, as well as competitive prices, should hold U.S. palm oil imports to between 550 million and 700 million pounds a year, or 4-5 percent of annual use.

Give her the "timed protein release" of Wayne 38% Dari-Blen

A cow works all the time. Her system continues to manufacture milk as long as the nutrients of her last feeding keep working.

Wayne 38% Dari-Blen an all-natural supplement, palatable even at high levels, contains several sources of protein which are made available to the cow in different lengths of time following feeding. We call this discovery "timed protein release."

For top producing herds, Wayne 38% Dari-Blen also contains calcium, phosphorus, trace minerals and vitamins.

Added to local grains and fed along with quality roughage, it makes the finest program you can give your cows.

If you've reached a production limit — can't seem to get any more milk out of your cows, talk with your Wayne man. He'll use the Wayne Maximizer™ to determine the milking ration best suited to your herd needs, complementing your own grain supplies. Power-packed Wayne Dari-Blens, with "timed protein release," could trigger the production you're looking for.
